NEW QUESTION # 60

Which annotation should a developer use on an Apex method to make it available to be wired to a property in a Lightning web component?

- A. @AuraEnabled
- B. @RemoteAction
- C. @RemoteAction(cacheable=true)
- D. @AuraEnabled(cacheable=true)

Answer: D

Explanation:

To make an Apex method available to be wired to a property in a Lightning web component, the developer should use the @AuraEnabled annotation with the cacheable parameter set to true. This indicates that the method is meant to be used in a read-only manner and that the results can be cached on the client. This improves the performance and user experience of the Lightning web component. The @RemoteAction annotation is used for Visualforce remoting, not for Lightning web components. The @AuraEnabled annotation without the cacheable parameter is used for imperative Apex methods that are invoked from a Lightning web component's JavaScript controller. The @RemoteAction(cacheable=true) annotation is not valid syntax. References: Call Apex Methods, Apex Annotations

NEW QUESTION # 61

Universal Containers has developed custom Apex code and Lightning Components in a Sandbox environment. They need to deploy the code and associated configurations to the Production environment.

What is the recommended process for deploying the code and configurations to Production?

- B. Use a change set to deploy the Apex code and Lightning Components.
- C. Use the Force.com IDE to deploy the Apex code and Lightning Components.
- D. Use Salesforce CLI to deploy the Apex code and Lightning Components.

Answer: B

Explanation:

Why Change Sets?

Change Sets are the recommended and simplest way to deploy metadata, including Apex code and Lightning Components, from Sandbox to Production.

Why Not Other Options?

A: The Force.com IDE is deprecated.

B: The Ant Migration Tool is more suitable for complex deployments but not necessary for standard Sandbox- to-Production migration.

D: Salesforce CLI is effective for deployment but requires scripting expertise, making Change Sets easier for most users.

- D. `lightning-input-field`

Answer: D
