In what order are Access Controls evaluated?

- A. Field-level - most specific to most general; then Table-level - most specific to most general
- B. Field-level - most general to most specific; then Row-level - most specific to most general
- C. Table-level - most specific to most general; then Row-level - most specific to most general

- D. Table-level - most specific to most general; then Field-level - most specific to most general

Answer: D

Explanation:

Access Control Rules (ACLs) in ServiceNow determine who can access a record, table, or field. They are evaluated in a specific order to ensure security.

Table-Level ACLs are evaluated first

ServiceNow first checks if the user has permission to access the table itself.

If the user does not have access at the table level, no further checks are performed.

Field-Level ACLs are evaluated next

Once table access is granted, ServiceNow checks if the user has permission to access individual fields.

More specific ACLs override broader ones (e.g., incident.short_description takes priority over incident.*).

Order of Specificity (Most Specific to Least Specific)

Field-Specific ACL (incident.short_description.read)

Wildcard Field ACL (incident.*.read)

Table-Level ACL (incident.read)

Wildcard Table ACL (*.read)

ACL Evaluation Order in ServiceNow: This ensures that specific rules take precedence over general rules for enhanced security.

Example of ACL Evaluation in Incident Table: ACL Rule Type

Example ACL

Evaluation Order

Field-Specific

incident.short_description.read

First (Most Specific)

Wildcard Field

incident.*.read

Second

Table-Level

incident.read

Third

Wildcard Table

*.read

Last (Most General)

A: Field-level - most general to most specific; then Row-level - most specific to most general. Incorrect - Field-level ACLs are not evaluated first; table-level ACLs are checked before field-level.

B: Table-level - most specific to most general; then Row-level - most specific to most general. Incorrect - "Row-level" is not a correct term in ServiceNow ACL processing.

D: Field-level - most specific to most general; then Table-level - most specific to most general. Incorrect - Table-level ACLs are always evaluated before field-level ACLs.

Incorrect Answer Choices Analysis:

Conclusion: The correct answer is:

C: Table-level - most specific to most general; then Field-level - most specific to most general. This ensures that general table permissions are granted before checking field-level access, following a structured and secure approach to access control in ServiceNow.
