ServiceNow Certified System Administrator Sample Questions (Q416-Q421):

NEW QUESTION # 416
Which type of tables may be extended by other tables, but do not extend another table?

- A. Custom Tables
- B. Core Tables
- C. Base Tables
- D. Extended Tables

Answer: C

Explanation:
In ServiceNow, tables are structured in a hierarchical format where some tables can extend others, inheriting fields and properties.
However, there are specific tables that do not extend any other table but can be extended-these are known as Base Tables.
Base Tables:
A Base Table is a table that does not extend another table but can be extended by other tables.
It serves as a foundation for creating new tables.
Example:
Task Table (task)- The Incident, Problem, and Change tables extend from the Task table.
Configuration Item Table (cmdb_ci)- Used as a base for various CI types.
Core Tables:
Core Tables are the standard tables provided by ServiceNow.
They can be base tables or extended tables depending on their role.
Example:
Task (task) and User (sys_user) are core tables, but only some core tables are base tables.
Extended Tables:
Extended Tables are tables that inherit fields and functionality from a parent table.
Example:
Incident (incident) extends from Task (task).
Custom Tables:
Custom Tables are tables that developers create for specific business needs.
They may or may not extend another table depending on their design.
Understanding Table Types in ServiceNow
Why Answer "A" is Correct:##"Base Tables" are tables that may be extended by other tables but do not extend another table.
These tables do not inherit fields from any other table.
They provide the foundation for extensions, making them the top-level tables in ServiceNow's data hierarchy.
Example: The Task table is a base table because it does not extend another table but serves as the foundation for many other tables (e.g., Incident, Problem, Change).
Why the Other Answers Are Incorrect:B. "Core Tables"
Incorrect because Core Tables are standard ServiceNow tables, but they can be either base or extended tables.
Not all core tables follow the definition of a base table.
C: "Extended Tables"
Incorrect because extended tables inherit fields from parent tables, meaning they do extend another table.
Example: The Incident table extends from the Task table, making it an extended table.
D: "Custom Tables"
Incorrect because Custom Tables can be either base or extended tables depending on how they are created.
If a developer chooses to extend an existing table, then it is not a base table.
