CSI Canadian Securities Course Exam2 Sample Questions (Q122-Q127):

NEW QUESTION # 122

Which macroeconomic factors would have a positive impact on investor expectations and the price of securities?

- A. A decrease in government spending with corresponding tax cuts to individuals.
- B. Targeting certain sectors of the economy with monetary policy measures and tax breaks.
- C. Increased taxes on corporations with the goal of lower government debt.
- D. Low levels of government debt and consumer indebtedness.

Answer: D

Explanation:

Low levels of government and consumer indebtedness create a positive macroeconomic environment for investor expectations and securities prices. When debt levels are manageable, governments and consumers have greater financial flexibility, which can lead to increased economic activity and improved investor confidence.

* Why This Impacts Investor Expectations Positively:

* Low government debt allows for expansionary fiscal policies (e.g., increased spending or tax cuts) without significantly increasing borrowing costs.

* Low consumer debt supports higher disposable income, enabling more spending and investment.

* Both factors reduce the risk of higher interest rates, keeping borrowing costs low for businesses and individuals, which supports economic growth and, in turn, securities prices.

* Why Other Options Are Incorrect:

* A: Targeted monetary policies may benefit specific sectors but are not a universally positive factor for all securities.

* B: Increased taxes on corporations can reduce profitability and negatively impact investor expectations.

* D: A decrease in government spending with tax cuts could slow economic growth, negatively impacting securities prices.

Which regulatory body is responsible for the surveillance of trading and market-related activities of participants on Canadian equity marketplaces?

- D. CIRO

Answer: D

Explanation:

The Canadian Investment Regulatory Organization (CIRO) is responsible for overseeing trading and market-related activities of participants on Canadian equity marketplaces. CIRO conducts surveillance to ensure compliance with rules, regulations, and fair market practices.

Other options:

* OBSI (Ombudsman for Banking Services and Investments): Handles disputes between financial institutions and their clients but does not conduct trading surveillance.

* OSFI (Office of the Superintendent of Financial Institutions): Regulates and supervises federally regulated financial institutions, focusing on their solvency.

* CSA (Canadian Securities Administrators): Coordinates securities regulation across Canada but does not directly monitor trading activities.

- D. Ability to act on legitimate insider information.

Answer: A

- * Key Features of Listed Private Equity Companies
