APICS Certified Supply Chain Professional Sample Questions (Q122-Q127):

NEW QUESTION # 122

Which of the following outcomes typically is the primary benefit from implementing a reverse logistics system?

- A. Complying with the SCOR framework
- B. Extending the product life cycle
- C. Reducing returns processing costs
- D. Reducing legal costs

Answer: B

Explanation:

Implementing a reverse logistics system primarily aims to manage the return of products from customers back to the company. One of the significant outcomes is extending the product life cycle by:

- * Refurbishment and Resale: Returned products can be refurbished and resold, extending their usability and lifecycle.
- * Recycling and Reuse: Components from returned products can be recycled or reused in manufacturing new products, reducing waste and conserving resources.
- * Cost Savings: Effective reverse logistics can reduce costs associated with waste disposal and procurement of new materials by reclaiming value from returned products.

NEW QUESTION # 123

Which of the following statements about communications related to change management is most accurate?

- A. Communication should flow from key business subject matter experts to upper management.
- B. Communication should flow both directions between all levels within the organization and key messages should be repeated frequently.
- C. The communication plan for implementing change should place equal emphasis on business objectives and information technology (IT) processes.
- D. Communication should flow down from upper management to ensure focus on the business directives.

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 124

Which of the following advantages of radio frequency identification (RFID) is the main benefit for material handling?

- A. Improved speed and flexibility
- B. Ability to withstand harsh environments
- C. Detection of multiple tags
- D. Long distance readability

Answer: A

Explanation:

* RFID in Material Handling: Radio Frequency Identification (RFID) uses electromagnetic fields to automatically identify and track tags attached to objects.

* Main Benefits:

* Improved Speed and Flexibility: RFID allows for quick scanning and identification of multiple items without line-of-sight, enhancing operational efficiency.

* Long Distance Readability: Beneficial but secondary to speed and flexibility in material handling.

* Ability to Withstand Harsh Environments: Important for durability but not the primary benefit.

* Detection of Multiple Tags: Contributes to speed and efficiency but is part of the broader advantage of improved speed and flexibility.

* Conclusion: The main benefit of RFID for material handling is the improved speed and flexibility it offers, allowing for efficient and agile operations.

NEW QUESTION # 125

The use of standardized components typically results in:

- A. increased planning and control efforts to avoid shortages.
- B. fewer inventory items and inventory levels.
- C. smaller bills of materials, fewer routings, and fewer manufacturing orders.
- D. more items, larger bills of material (BOMS), and increased material requirements planning (MRP) run time.

Answer: B

Explanation:

The use of standardized components typically leads to fewer inventory items and inventory levels due to the following reasons:

* Simplification of Inventory Management: Standardized components reduce the variety of parts needed, simplifying inventory management.

* Economies of Scale: Purchasing standardized components in larger quantities can reduce costs and streamline procurement processes.

* Reduced Stock Keeping Units (SKUs): Fewer unique components mean fewer SKUs to manage, which simplifies tracking and storage.

* Inventory Reduction: With standardized parts, companies can maintain lower safety stock levels due to more predictable usage patterns.
