ISTQB Certified Tester Foundation Level (CTFL v4.0) Sample Questions (Q56-Q61):

NEW QUESTION # 56
Which ONE of the following work products TYPICALLY belongs to test execution?

- A. A test plan that describes the test strategy and test objectives.
- B. Automated test scripts used for test execution.

- C. A list of test conditions prioritized during test analysis.
- D. Test logs that document the results of test execution.

Answer: D

Explanation:
Comprehensive and Detailed In-Depth Explanation:
Test execution involves running test cases and documenting results. Test logs (A) provide evidence of executed tests, failures, and actual outcomes. Automated test scripts (B) are part of test implementation, test plans (C) belong to test planning, and test conditions (D) are identified during test analysis.

NEW QUESTION # 57
The following part of a business process flow is specified; REPEAT (book a bill) UNTIL (User presses Cancel). How many test cases are necessary in order to achieve 100% branch coverage of the process flow?

- A. 0
- B. Infinite
- C. 1
- D. 2

Answer: D

Explanation:
To achieve 100% branch coverage of the process flow, we need to test both the true and false outcomes of the condition (User presses Cancel). Branch coverage is a type of structural testing that measures how many decision outcomes in a program have been executed by a test suite. Branch coverage can be used to assess the adequacy or completeness of a test suite.
To test the true outcome of the condition, we need a test case that simulates the user pressing Cancel after booking a bill. This test case will exit the loop and end the process flow.
To test the false outcome of the condition, we need a test case that simulates the user not pressing Cancel after booking a bill. This test case will repeat the loop and book another bill.
Therefore, we need at least two test cases to achieve 100% branch coverage of the process flow. One test case for each possible outcome of the condition.

NEW QUESTION # 58
Which of the following exemplifies how a software bug can cause harm to a company?

- A. When uninstalling the application, the uninstall dialog has a spelling mistake
- B. The timeout on the login page of a web site is 9 minutes, while the requirement was for 10 minutes
- C. When calculating the final price in a shopping list, the price of the last item is not added
- D. "Print" prints the last page twice for a file with 1000 pages

Answer: C

Explanation:
A software bug can cause harm to a company by directly affecting its operations, reputation, user satisfaction, and financials. Option D, "When calculating the final price in a shopping list, the price of the last item is not added," describes a defect that directly impacts the core functionality of a financial transaction, potentially leading to financial loss and customer dissatisfaction. This can have severe implications for the company's credibility and revenue. Options A, B, and C describe bugs that, while potentially annoying, do not have the same direct impact on the company's core operations and financial integrity as option D.

NEW QUESTION # 59
You are an experienced tester on a project with incomplete requirements and under pressure to deploy.
What type of testing should you do?

- A. Decision-based testing.
- B. Exploratory testing.
- C. Error guessing.

- D. Checklist-based testing.

Answer: B

Explanation:
When working on a project with incomplete requirements and under pressure to deploy, exploratory testing is particularly suitable. This type of testing allows testers to use their expertise and intuition to explore the system's functionality and identify defects without needing detailed specifications. Exploratory testing is flexible and can quickly adapt to changes and gaps in the requirements.

NEW QUESTION # 60
The fact that defects are usually not evenly distributed among the various modules that make up a software application, but rather their distribution tend to reflect the Pareto principle:

- A. is a false myth
- B. is expressed by the testing principle referred to as Tests wear out'
- C. is expressed by the testing principle referred to as 'Bug prediction'
- D. is expressed by the testing principle referred to as 'Defects cluster together'

Answer: D

Explanation:
The fact that defects are usually not evenly distributed among the various modules that make up a software application, but rather their distribution tend to reflect the Pareto principle, is expressed by the testing principle referred to as 'Defects cluster together'. This principle states that a small number of modules contain most of the defects detected, or that a small number of causes are responsible for most of the defects. This principle can be used to guide the test analysis and design activities, by prioritizing the testing of the most critical or risky modules, or by applying more rigorous test techniques to them. Therefore, option C is the correct answer.
