HPE Aruba Networking Switching Professional Exam Sample Questions (Q36-Q41):

NEW QUESTION # 36

Match each network requirement to the most appropriate routing protocol. Options may be used more than once.

Answer:

Explanation:

Explanation:

Answer Area:

- * Advertise your company 's public address space to a service provider: eBGP
- * Connecting to the Internet over a single service provider connection: Static Routing
- * Connecting to multiple service providers and learning different routes from each one: eBGP
- * Resilient and scalable routing for networks within an organization using route reflectors: iBGP
- * Resilient routing for a large campus network that is efficient and easily scalable: OSPF In AOS-CX design, selecting the right routing protocol is based on the boundary of the administrative control and the required scale.
- * Advertise public address space to a service provider (eBGP): External BGP (eBGP) is the industry- standard protocol used to exchange routing information between different Autonomous Systems (AS).
To let the world know how to reach your public IP block, you must " speak " eBGP with your ISP.
- * Single service provider connection (Static Routing): When a network has only one exit point (a " stub " connection) to the Internet, dynamic protocols are unnecessary. A simple default static route (0.0.0.0/0) pointing to the ISP gateway is the most efficient and least resource-intensive method.
- * Multiple service providers / Multi-homing (eBGP): When you have two or more ISPs, your switch needs to make a decision on which path is better based on attributes like AS-Path length or MED. eBGP is required here to receive and process these external path attributes.
- * Internal organization routing with route reflectors (iBGP): Internal BGP (iBGP) is used to carry BGP prefixes within an AS. Because iBGP requires a " Full Mesh " by default (every router connected to every other router), it does not scale well. Route Reflectors are the architectural solution used to allow a central switch to reflect routes to others, ensuring scalability within the organization.
- * Large campus network (OSPF): Open Shortest Path First (OSPF) is a Link-State Interior Gateway Protocol (IGP). It is the preferred choice for Aruba campus environments because of its fast convergence, hierarchical design (Areas), and ability to handle large numbers of internal subnets efficiently.

NEW QUESTION # 37

Which CLI command displays the overall system uptime and CPU usage on an Aruba CX switch?

- A. show processes
- B. display cpu statistics
- C. show system uptime
- D. show system info

Answer: D

Explanation:

The show system info command displays CPU usage, memory consumption, and uptime, helping troubleshoot performance issues related to resource exhaustion.

NEW QUESTION # 38

Which network conditions can lead to high packet loss?

(Select two.)

Response:

- A. STP blocking all ports
- B. Congested links
- C. QoS misconfiguration
- D. Incorrect VLAN assignments

Answer: B,C

NEW QUESTION # 39

Which two Spanning Tree Protocol (STP) versions are supported on Aruba CX switches? (Select two)

- A. MSTP
- B. VSTP
- C. SPTP
- D. RSTP

Answer: A,D

Explanation:

Aruba CX switches support Rapid Spanning Tree Protocol (RSTP) for fast convergence and Multiple Spanning Tree Protocol (MSTP) for per-instance VLAN mapping.

NEW QUESTION # 40

Which CLI command removes an Aruba CX switch from Aruba Central management?

- A. no aruba-central
- B. telemetry disable
- C. cloud-unregister
- D. aruba-central disable

Answer: D

Explanation:

The no aruba-central command unlinks the switch from Aruba Central, stopping cloud-based monitoring and returning it to local management control.
