CrowdStrike Certified Identity Specialist(CCIS) Exam Sample Questions (Q18-Q23):

NEW QUESTION # 18

In the Predefined ReportsSubjectdropdown, which category is associated with endpoints?

- A. Events
- B. Incidents
- C. Insights
- D. Accounts

Answer: A

Explanation:

Within Falcon Identity Protection, Predefined Reports allow administrators to generate standardized reports based on specific data subjects. The Subject dropdown determines the type of data the report will be built from, such as identity risks, authentication activity, or endpoint-related telemetry.

The category associated with endpoints in the Subject dropdown is Events. Endpoint-related data—such as authentication attempts, logons, protocol usage, and domain controller-observed activity—is captured and represented as events within Falcon. These events form the foundational telemetry used for identity detections, investigations, and reporting.

By contrast:

- * Insights represent aggregated analytical findings derived from events.
- * Incidents group multiple detections into a single investigative narrative.
- * Accounts focus on identity entities such as users and service accounts.

Endpoint visibility in reporting is therefore tied directly to Events, as events reflect the raw and enriched activity observed on endpoints and domain controllers. This structure aligns with Falcon's identity-first security model, where endpoint-observed authentication behavior feeds identity risk scoring and Zero Trust decisions. The CCIS curriculum explicitly associates endpoint-related reporting with the Eventssubject, making Option B the correct and verified answer.

NEW QUESTION # 19

How long does it typically take Falcon Identity to develop a baseline of a user?

- A. Two weeks
- B. One month
- C. One week
- D. Three months

Answer: C

Explanation:

Falcon Identity Protection establishes a user baseline by observing authentication behavior over time, including login frequency, endpoints used, access patterns, and protocol usage. According to the CCIS curriculum, Falcon typically requires approximately one week of consistent activity to develop an initial, reliable baseline for a user.

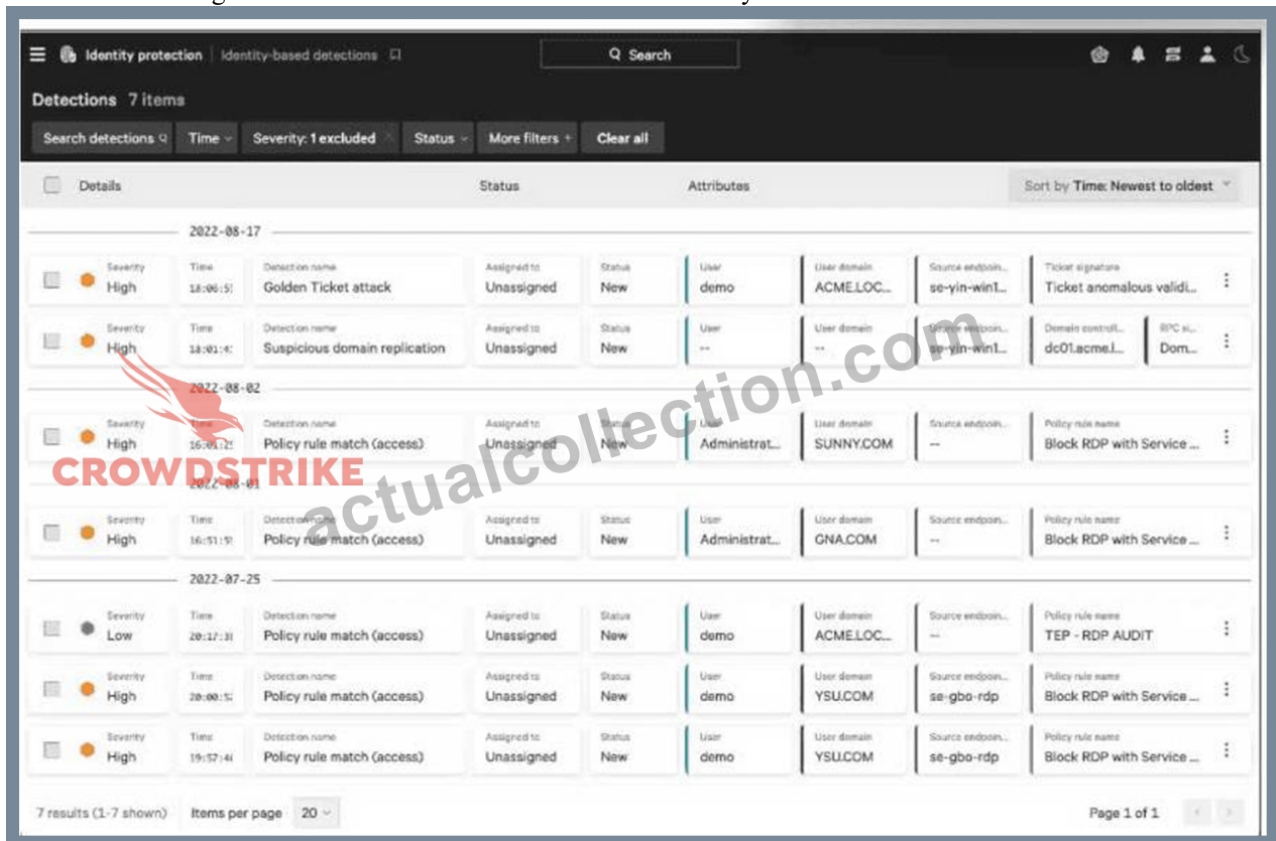

This baseline allows Falcon to distinguish normal behavior from anomalies and to calculate accurate risk scores. While the baseline continues to mature over time and becomes more precise with additional data, the first usable behavioral model is generally formed within a week.

Longer timeframes such as one or three months are not required to begin detecting abnormal behavior.

Conversely, periods shorter than a week may not provide sufficient behavioral data to accurately model normal usage patterns. Because Falcon can rapidly establish a functional baseline while continuously refining it, Option C (One week) is the correct and verified answer.

NEW QUESTION # 20

Which of the following are NOT included within the three-dot menu on Identity-based Detections?

Which of the following are not included within the three-dot menu on Identity-based Detections?

- A. Edit status

- B. Add comment
- C. Add to Watchlist
- D. Add exclusion

Answer: C

Explanation:

In Falcon Identity Protection, the three-dot (#) action menu on an identity-based detection provides analysts with a limited set of actions that apply directly to the detection itself. According to the CCIS curriculum, these actions are designed to support investigation workflow, tuning, and documentation.

The supported actions in the detection-level three-dot menu include:

- * Edit status, which allows analysts to update the detection state (for example, New, In Progress, or Closed).
- * Add comment, which enables collaboration and documentation directly on the detection.
- * Add exclusion, where supported, to suppress future detections that match known benign behavior.

Add to Watchlist is not included in this menu because watchlists are applied to entities (such as users, service accounts, or endpoints), not to detections. Watchlists are managed from entity views or investigation workflows and are used to increase visibility and monitoring priority for specific identities—not to act on individual detections.

This distinction is emphasized in CCIS training to reinforce the separation between entity-centric actions and detection-centric actions. Because watchlists operate at the entity level, Option B is the correct and verified answer.

NEW QUESTION # 21

When an endpoint that has not been used in the last 90 days becomes active, a detection for Use of Stale Endpoint is reported.

- A. 60 days
- B. 30 days
- C. 180 days
- D. 90 days

Answer: D

Explanation:

Falcon Identity Protection identifies stale endpoints as systems that have not authenticated or shown activity for an extended period and then suddenly become active. According to the CCIS curriculum, an endpoint that has been inactive for 90 days and then resumes activity will trigger a Use of Stale Endpoint detection.

This detection is important because attackers frequently exploit dormant or forgotten systems to re-enter environments, evade monitoring, or move laterally. A long period of inactivity followed by sudden authentication activity is considered a strong identity risk signal.

The 90-day threshold is used to establish a reliable inactivity baseline while minimizing false positives.

Shorter timeframes could incorrectly flag normal usage patterns, while longer timeframes could delay detection of genuine threats. Because Falcon explicitly defines stale endpoint activity using a 90-day inactivity window, Option D is the correct answer.

NEW QUESTION # 22

How many days will an identity-based incident be suppressed if new events related to the same incident occur?

- A. 5 days
- B. 14 days
- C. 30 days
- D. 7 days

Answer: A

Explanation:

Falcon Identity Protection uses incident suppression windows to prevent alert fatigue while still maintaining accurate incident tracking. According to the CCIS documentation, when new events related to an existing identity-based incident occur, the incident is suppressed for 5 days.

This suppression means that Falcon does not generate a new incident for the same activity during this window. Instead, additional detections are added to the existing incident, allowing analysts to view the full progression of the threat in a single investigative context.

The 5-day suppression window ensures that ongoing identity attacks—such as repeated authentication abuse or lateral movement—are consolidated rather than fragmented across multiple incidents. This improves investigation efficiency and aligns with Falcon's incident lifecycle management approach.

Because the suppression period is fixed at 5 days, Option D is the correct and verified answer.
