- A. 集計関数を使用して7年以上前のレコードを照会し、AggregateResult オブジェクトを削除します。
- B. SOSL ステートメントを実行して、7年以上前のレコードを検索し、結果セット全体を削除します。
- C. 7年以上前のレコードをクエリして削除するバッチ Apex プロセスを毎日実行するようにスケジュールします。
- D. 7年以上前のレコードを照会する @future プロセスをスケジュールし、1,000 件のレコード バッチで自分自身を再帰的に呼び出してそれらを削除します。

Answer: C

Explanation:

When dealing with large-scale data maintenance, such as deleting a million records daily, Batch Apex is the most robust and scalable solution provided by the Salesforce platform. Batch Apex is specifically designed for processing high volumes of records by breaking the total record set into manageable "batches" (defaulting to 200 records per batch). This prevents the transaction from hitting platform governor limits, such as the limit on the total number of DML statements or the maximum number of records processed in a single transaction.

By scheduling a Batch class, the system handles the heavy lifting asynchronously, ensuring that org performance is not negatively impacted during peak hours.

Other options are unsuitable for this scale. Using @future methods for recursive processing is a poor practice because Salesforce prohibits calling a future method from another future method, and it is difficult to monitor or manage the execution flow. Aggregate functions and AggregateResult objects are used for calculations and data grouping, not for DML operations like deletion. Similarly, SOSL is optimized for text-based searching across multiple objects and returns a limited number of results, making it inappropriate for an exhaustive cleanup of a million records. Batch Apex allows for the use of a QueryLocator, which can handle up to 50 million records, providing the necessary throughput for this high-volume requirement.
