UiPath Automation Business Analyst Associate Exam (2023.10) Sample Questions (Q67-Q72):

NEW QUESTION # 67

What is the output of the Process Analysis stage?

- A. Process Definition Document (PDD)
- B. Project Charter
- C. Hypercare Support Plan
- D. Solution Design Document

Answer: A

Explanation:

The primary output of the Process Analysis stage is the Process Definition Document (PDD). This document captures a detailed description of the As-Is process, including process steps, roles involved, input/output data, exception scenarios, and system interactions.

The Business Analyst and Solution Architect work closely with the Client Team to observe the current process and document it in a structured and comprehensive format. The PDD serves as the foundation for defining the scope, identifying automation opportunities, and creating the future To-Be design.

A well-documented PDD ensures that the implementation team fully understands what is being automated and helps in developing accurate test cases for UAT and success criteria for deployment approval.

NEW QUESTION # 68

Which of the following teams is highly recommended to be involved early in the implementation process for technical management?

- A. UiPath Customer Support
- B. Marketing Team
- C. Human Resources Team
- D. Client IT Team

Answer: D

Explanation:

The Client IT Team is highly recommended to be involved early in the automation implementation process because they own the technical management of the department's software and infrastructure. Their involvement is critical for provisioning access, ensuring network security compliance, setting up environments, and integrating UiPath components (e.g., Orchestrator, Robots, and Studio) with existing systems.

Delays in engaging the Client IT Team can result in project bottlenecks, especially when access to applications or technical support is needed. They also play a crucial role in helping Infrastructure Engineers from the Implementation Team understand the client's IT policies and systems, enabling a smooth technical setup.

Involving them early ensures that infrastructure readiness, access provisioning, and system compatibility are not left to the last minute, reducing risks and enabling a seamless development and deployment experience.

NEW QUESTION # 69

Who is primarily responsible for building automations based on business requirements in UiPath projects?

- A. Automation Developer
- B. Project Manager
- C. Business Analyst
- D. Infrastructure Engineer

Answer: A

Explanation:

The Automation Developer is primarily responsible for building automations based on the business requirements that have been analyzed and documented in the Process Definition Document (PDD) and further detailed in the Solution Design Document (SDD). Using UiPath Studio and related tools, the developer creates workflows that follow best practices, coding standards, and modular architecture. They also implement exception handling, data manipulation, integration with applications, and orchestrator configurations as required.

In addition to development, they participate in unit testing, User Acceptance Testing (UAT) support, and Hypercare, making adjustments based on feedback or defects found. Their role is critical in turning the design into a functional automation solution that meets business expectations.

NEW QUESTION # 70

What is the final step the business analyst must take to complete the Process Design Document?

- A. Validate the document with both the business owner and the development team.
- B. Get sign-off from the process owner.

- C. Create the test case scenarios.
- D. Describe the As Is and the To Be.

Answer: A

Explanation:

The final step in completing the Process Design Document (PDD) is to validate the document with both the business owner and the development team. Although describing the As-Is and To-Be processes, drafting workflows, and collecting inputs are fundamental steps, none of these finalize the document without validation.

Validation ensures that the PDD is accurate, complete, and aligned with both business expectations and technical feasibility. From the business side, the process owner confirms that the documented workflows correctly reflect the real operations, business rules, exceptions, and desired outcomes. From the technical side, the development team verifies that the documented To-Be process is feasible for automation, aligns with UiPath capabilities, and contains the level of detail needed for solution design.

The validation step is crucial because the PDD becomes the foundation for solution design, development, test planning, and success criteria definition. Without this mutual agreement, automation may fail to meet expectations, result in rework, or lead to misaligned business and technical interpretations. Proper validation ensures project success and prevents downstream issues.

NEW QUESTION # 71

Which stage of the Automation Implementation Methodology involves close monitoring of performance after deployment?

- A. Deployment and Hypercare
- B. Project Closure
- C. Business Case and Technical Validation
- D. Development and Testing

Answer: A

Explanation:

The Deployment and Hypercare stage involves the actual go-live of the automation solution and a subsequent period of close monitoring, known as Hypercare. During this phase, the Implementation Team ensures that the automation performs as expected in the live environment and addresses any post-deployment issues that may arise.

Key participants in this stage include the solution architect, project manager, and automation developers, who are responsible for monitoring system performance, user feedback, and handling production incidents.

The Hypercare period also helps in building confidence with end-users and validating that all components are functioning in accordance with business expectations.

This stage is vital for a smooth transition to long-term support and operational stability. It also allows for minor optimizations and performance tuning before the project is officially closed.
