NEW QUESTION # 181

A request has been made to restrict lookup files up to 500 megabytes for replication. Anything larger should not be replicated. Which of the following parameters provides the correct control for this scenario?

- A. maxBundleSize
- B. includeReplicatedLookupSize

- C. `excludeReplicatedLookupSize`
- D. `maxMemoryBundleSize`

Answer: C

Explanation:

In Splunk Enterprise, when knowledge bundles (which include lookup files, configurations, and other knowledge objects) are replicated between search heads and indexers, administrators can control the maximum size of lookup files that are eligible for replication.

The correct parameter to use is `excludeReplicatedLookupSize`, defined in `distsearch.conf`. This parameter specifies a maximum file size (in megabytes) beyond which lookup files are excluded from bundle replication. By setting this to 500, any lookup file larger than 500 MB will not be replicated to search peers.

This is especially important for performance optimization and preventing unnecessary network load during search head to indexer communication.

Example configuration (`distsearch.conf`):

[replicationSettings]

excludeReplicatedLookupSize = 500
