NEW QUESTION # 175

The description and pricing for an AV solution is submitted during which phase of an AV project?

- A. Proposal
- B. Execution
- C. Needs Analysis
- D. Request for Information (RFI)

Answer: A

Explanation:

The proposal phase is when the description and pricing of an AV solution are submitted to the client. This phase involves presenting a detailed plan that includes system components, costs, and how the solution meets the client's needs. The proposal allows the client to review and approve the solution before moving forward to execution.

CTS Technology Specialist ReferenceThe CTS project management guidelines state that the proposal phase includes submitting a comprehensive description of the AV system and associated costs, forming the basis for client approval and contract negotiation.

NEW QUESTION # 176

What PRIMARY concern should the sales representative have had during the site survey of this room?

- A. combination of fluorescent and Incandescent lighting
- B. ceiling clearance for the projector lift
- C. length of cable runs
- D. room orientation

Answer: B

Explanation:

The primary concern for the sales representative during the site survey should be the ceiling clearance for the projector lift. Ensuring that there is sufficient space for the projector lift to operate without obstruction is crucial for proper installation and operation. Inadequate clearance can lead to difficulties in mounting and deploying the projector, potentially compromising the projection quality and system functionality.

Additionally, it is important to verify that the projector can be positioned at the correct height and angle to achieve the desired image size and alignment.

NEW QUESTION # 177

What is the MAIN difference between OLED displays and LED displays?

- A. higher brightness
- B. self-emitting light source
- C. luminosity
- D. determined screen shape

Answer: B

Explanation:

The main difference between OLED (Organic Light Emitting Diode) displays and LED (Light Emitting Diode) displays is that OLED displays use self-emitting light sources. In OLED technology, each pixel emits its own light, allowing for better contrast ratios and deeper blacks, as pixels can be turned off completely. In contrast, LED displays use a backlight to illuminate the screen, which can result in less precise control over brightness and contrast.

NEW QUESTION # 178

Noting the position of ventilation ducts is useful when determining

- A. where people can be seated in the room.
- B. the best position for the lectern.
- C. the heat gain of the equipment rack.
- D. where a projector can be suspended.

Answer: D

Explanation:

When installing a projector, it is essential to account for ventilation ducts as they affect where a projector can be suspended.

Ventilation ducts influence airflow and can affect the cooling requirements of AV equipment. Positioning near ducts may cause issues like vibration, interference with airflow, and temperature inconsistencies.

CTS Technology Specialist ReferenceThe CTS materials emphasize checking ventilation, HVAC placement, and airflow during site surveys to determine optimal equipment placement and avoid interference with cooling and sound.

NEW QUESTION # 179

Which of the following terms is defined as a lamp that produces light by heating a filament in a sealed glass housing?

- A. CFL Lamp
- B. Fluorescent Lamp
- C. Incandescent Lamp
- D. LED Lamp

Answer: C

Explanation:

Incandescent lamps generate light by heating a filament inside a glass enclosure. This process is different from fluorescent, CFL, and LED lamps, which rely on gas discharge or semiconductor technology rather than a heated filament.
