The CTFL-AcT certification exam is designed to test an individual's understanding of acceptance testing, which is a critical phase in the software development life cycle. Acceptance testing involves testing the software against the user's requirements and ensuring that it meets the user's expectations. With the CTFL-AcT certification, individuals can demonstrate their expertise in acceptance testing and their ability to ensure that software meets the user's needs.

ISQI CTFL-AcT (ISTQB Foundation Level - Acceptance Testing) Exam is a certification exam designed to evaluate an individual's knowledge and skills in acceptance testing. Acceptance testing is the process of verifying whether a software application meets the customer's requirements and is ready for deployment. CTFL-AcT Exam is ideal for professionals who are involved in software development, testing, and quality assurance. The ISQI CTFL-AcT certification is recognized globally and can enhance an individual's career prospects in the software testing industry.

Achieving the CTFL-AcT certification is a valuable asset for professionals who want to advance their careers in the field of software testing. It demonstrates their commitment to excellence and their ability to ensure that software products meet the needs and expectations of users. By becoming certified, professionals can increase their earning potential and open up new opportunities for advancement.

ISQI ISTQB Foundation Level - Acceptance Testing Sample Questions (Q73-Q78):

NEW QUESTION # 73

Which one of the following statements describes correctly how acceptance testing may be augmented with other test techniques or approaches?

- A. In a priority-based testing approach, prioritization of acceptance tests depends on identified product risks.
- B. In a model-based testing approach, acceptance tests are generated from graphical or textual models.
- C. In a risk-based testing approach, acceptance criteria are derived from the tester's experience and intuition.
- D. In a black-box testing approach, acceptance test scenarios follow the implemented sequence of function calls in the code.

Answer: B

Explanation:

Model-Based Testing (MBT) is a test design technique in which test cases are derived from a model that describes some aspects of the system's behavior. In the context of acceptance testing, MBT can be used to generate high-level acceptance test cases automatically from business process models, use case diagrams, state models, or decision tables.

Option A is correct because MBT supports the systematic generation of acceptance test cases from these models, enabling better coverage of business rules and workflows while maintaining traceability to the requirements.

Other options:

B is close but slightly off: prioritization of acceptance tests in a priority-based approach depends on business value or stakeholder-defined priorities, not strictly on product risks.

C is incorrect. Risk-based testing relies on structured risk assessment, not just intuition or experience.

D is false. Black-box testing focuses on inputs and outputs without referencing the internal structure (such as function calls), which is characteristic of white-box testing.

Exact Reference - ISTQB CTFL Acceptance Testing Syllabus (Section 2.3):

"Model-based testing can be used to generate acceptance test cases systematically based on models representing business processes or system behavior."

NEW QUESTION # 74

Which one of the following statements describes the collaboration between business analysts and testers BEST?

- A. Once the requirements and acceptance criteria have been defined, business analysts are no longer involved in testing activities.
- B. Business analysts usually cannot review acceptance tests, because they do not understand the technical details.
- C. Business analysts collaborate on test planning and risk analysis to ensure that further on, appropriate test cases are developed and prioritized.
- D. Testers participate in identifying business needs of stakeholders to better understand the business needs and related requirements.

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 75

Which of the following sentences explains BEST how acceptance test cases can be derived from the acceptance criteria

- A. Test design should start with non-functional acceptance criteria and only then with functional aspects
- B. Risk-based testing is not a good practice for designing and prioritizing tests because the objective is to cover only the acceptance criteria
- C. Acceptance criteria are not useful for creating acceptance test cases because experience-based techniques should be preferred
- D. Test techniques such as business process-based testing or use case testing can be used to create acceptance tests from the acceptance criteria

Answer: D

Explanation:

Acceptance criteria describe the conditions under which a requirement or user story is considered fulfilled.

These criteria serve as the basis for deriving acceptance test cases. To transform them into concrete tests, testers apply test design techniques such as:

Business process-based testing (deriving tests from modeled workflows)

Use case testing (based on user interactions with the system)

Option B is correct because it clearly describes how structured techniques are applied to translate acceptance criteria into actionable test cases, ensuring traceability and relevance.

Other options:

A is incorrect - experience-based techniques may supplement, but structured methods are foundational in deriving test cases from defined criteria.

C is misleading - risk-based testing is a well-established and effective practice for prioritizing test efforts, including acceptance testing.

D is incorrect - both functional and non-functional criteria are important; there's no fixed rule to prioritize one over the other.

B). Test techniques such as business process-based testing or use case testing can be used to create acceptance tests from the acceptance criteria

NEW QUESTION # 76

Which of the following information is most likely part of an acceptance test summary report?

- A. Technical details on defect fixes.
- B. Test procedure information.
- C. Test strategy and test design methods.
- D. Information to evaluate the level of risk for product release.

Answer: D

Explanation:

An acceptance test summary report is a high-level document produced at the end of acceptance testing. It provides stakeholders (especially business owners and decision-makers) with essential information to determine whether the system meets the acceptance criteria and whether it is ready for release.

Option A is correct because understanding the residual risk - based on test results, open defects, and coverage - is critical for release decisions. The summary report includes test execution status, significant findings, defect summaries, and an overall risk assessment.

Other options:

B (technical details on defect fixes) belong more in defect or technical reports, not in the acceptance summary.

C (test strategy/design methods) are part of the test plan, not the summary report.

D (test procedure info) is operational detail, not suited for a high-level summary report.

A). Information to evaluate the level of risk for product release.

NEW QUESTION # 77

Which one of the following statements regarding acceptance criteria is true?

- A. Acceptance criteria are specific to agile frameworks where they correspond to functional requirements.
- B. In acceptance test-driven development (ATDD), acceptance criteria replace acceptance tests.
- C. Acceptance criteria specify what shall be tested to verify that a requirement or user story has been implemented correctly.
- D. Testers should not be involved in writing acceptance criteria to make sure that the test is independent.

Answer: C
