NEW QUESTION # 58

A focus group is a form of which type of research?

- A. Qualitative
- B. Theoretical
- C. Statistical
- D. Quantitative

Explanation:

A focus group is a qualitative research method used to gather in-depth insights and opinions from a group of individuals about a particular product, service, concept, or idea. It involves a small number of participants, typically 6-10, who are selected based on shared characteristics such as demographics, interests, or experiences. The discussion is moderated by a trained facilitator who encourages participants to share their thoughts, feelings, and attitudes towards the topic. This method is particularly effective for exploring perceptions, opinions, and ideas, making it a valuable tool for business analysis.

The information aligns with the Business Analysis Body of Knowledge (BABOK) guide, which outlines focus groups as a technique within the Elicitation and Collaboration knowledge area. It is also supported by various sources that describe focus groups as a form of qualitative research 1 2 3 .

It ensures that the most current and relevant requirements are being addressed at any given time, aligning with the changing needs and values of the business and stakeholders.

The BABOK guide and various resources on business analysis emphasize the importance of continuous prioritization. It is acknowledged that requirements may be prioritized at any point in their lifecycle, and this ongoing process is crucial for aligning business needs with project outcomes 1 2 .
