Fill in the blank: An identity server uses a _____ to trust a Terminal Server Identity Agent.

- A. Certificate
- B. One-time password
- C. Token
- D. Shared secret

Answer: D

Explanation:

Explanation:

Explanation

The correct command to verify the CPUSE (Check Point Update Service Engine) version is:

lua
Check Point
SOFTWARE TECHNI
Copy code
HostName:0> show installer status build

Option B is incorrect because it uses the `[Expert@HostName:0]#` prompt, which is typically used for expert mode commands, but the CPUSE version can be checked using the `show installer status build` command in standard mode.

Option C is incorrect because it uses the `[Expert@HostName:0]#` prompt, and while it includes the `build` parameter, it's not the standard command to check the CPUSE version.

Option D is incorrect because it uses the "HostName:0>" prompt, but it lacks the "show" command and uses "build" instead of "status build."
