NEW QUESTION # 434

The four risks of supply chain risk management are supply, demand,:

- A. process, and environmental.
- B. quality, and process.
- C. value, and environmental.
- D. value, and sustainability.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Supply chain risk management typically addresses four main types of risks: supply risks, demand risks, process risks, and environmental risks. Supply risks pertain to disruptions in the supply of materials or components. Demand risks involve fluctuations or uncertainties in customer demand. Process risks are related to internal operations and processes, such as production or logistics failures. Environmental risks encompass external factors, such as natural disasters, regulatory changes, or economic shifts. These categories help organizations comprehensively identify and manage potential disruptions throughout the supply chain. References: Tang, C. S. (2006). NEW QUESTION # 435

Which of the following activities is the most appropriate use of an advanced planning and scheduling system?

- A. Selecting the target market for a product
- B. Creating a daily demand forecast
- C. Identifying constraints within a facility
- D. Optimizing transportation routes

Answer: C

Explanation:

An advanced planning and scheduling (APS) system is designed to enhance the efficiency and effectiveness of the production process. Its primary functions include:

* Constraint Identification: APS systems are highly effective at identifying constraints within a facility, such as bottlenecks, capacity limits, and material shortages. By pinpointing these constraints, the system helps in planning and optimizing the use of available resources.

* Production Optimization: They optimize scheduling by considering various constraints and ensuring that production schedules align with capacity and material availability.

* Scenario Analysis: APS systems allow for the simulation of different production scenarios to determine the best course of action in response to changing conditions.

* Real-Time Adjustments: They provide real-time data and feedback, enabling quick adjustments to production plans to address issues as they arise.
