NEW QUESTION # 385

A company's new systems administrator has been asked to create a new user for the human resources department. Which of the following will help the systems administrator understand the user privileges for each role in the company?

- A. Standard operating procedures
- B. Change management policy

- C. Identity and access control management policy
- D. Classification and management policy

Answer: C

Explanation:

An identity and access control management policy is a document that defines the roles, responsibilities, and rules for managing the identities and access rights of users in an organization¹. It specifies how users are authenticated, authorized, and audited when they access the organization's resources, such as systems, applications, data, and networks¹. An identity and access control management policy also describes the processes and procedures for creating, modifying, suspending, and deleting user accounts and privileges, as well as the standards and guidelines for selecting and managing passwords, tokens, certificates, and other authentication factors¹. An identity and access control management policy can help the systems administrator understand the user privileges for each role in the company, as it defines the access levels and permissions that are granted to different types of users, such as employees, contractors, vendors, partners, and customers¹. The policy also outlines the criteria and conditions for granting, changing, or revoking access rights, based on the principle of least privilege and the need-to-know basis¹. By following the identity and access control management policy, the systems administrator can ensure that the new user for the human resources department has the appropriate and secure access to the resources that are relevant to their job function and responsibilities¹. - A. Compute costs
- B. Licensing costs
- C. Human capital costs
- D. Bandwidth costs
- E. Data center maintenance costs

Answer: E

Explanation:

Moving internal applications to the cloud typically allows organizations to significantly reduce or eliminate data center maintenance costs, which include costs associated with hardware, power, cooling, physical security, and staff needed to maintain the infrastructure. NEW QUESTION # 389

Which of the following is a limitation of the SaaS cloud model?

- A. Users cannot choose the global location where their data will be stored
- B. Users do not have full control over the software version and roadmap of the cloud solution.
- C. It does not support integration with pre-existing identity engines.
- D. It does not scale to allow additional users.

Answer: B

Explanation:

One of the limitations of the SaaS cloud model is that users do not have full control over the software version and roadmap of the cloud solution. This means that users have to rely on the vendor to provide updates, patches, bug fixes, and new features for the software, and they may not be able to choose when or how to implement them. Users may also face compatibility issues with other applications or services if the vendor changes the software without prior notice or consultation. Users may also have limited or no access to the underlying code or configuration of the software, which may restrict their ability to customize or optimize the software for their specific needs.
