Trade Agreement Logic

Before we go and set up a trade agreement let's first discuss how the system evaluates trade agreements.

When Dynamics 365 Finance and Operations evaluates trade agreements it tries to find the most specific pricing that falls within the validity dates. What I mean by "most specific" pricing is, the system checks the "Party type code" as well as the "Product code type" to see if there is a valid price specific to that customer or vendor for the specific product selected on the sales order or purchase order line respectively. Then if it cannot find that most specific combinations it looks for the next level up which are the price groups and then finally if it can't find prices at the group level it looks for prices that may apply to all vendors or customers.

Box 2: Find next on trade agreement line for select customers only

The next trade agreement type is a line discount. As the name suggests a line discount will appear on the sales order line as a percentage discount or a per unit discount depending on how the trade agreement is set up.
