- B. It enables multicast traffic to be routed between separate PIM-SM domains.

- C. It prevents multicast traffic from entering OSPF areas.
- D. It reduces multicast traffic by compressing the data packets.

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 43

You are deploying IP phones to a customer site. The IP phones will be installed to share a common access port with the user's desktop computer. You are required to provide a mechanism to place user data traffic and voice traffic in different VLANs for class-service application.

How would you implement this solution?

- A. Apply a multifield classifier on the access ports that assigns voice packets to the assured forwarding class, based on the IP phone manufacturer's MAC QUI
- B. Configure VLAN tagging on the IP phones and use the voice VLAN feature on the access ports to assign lagged frames to the voice VLAN and untagged frames to a data VLAN
- C. Configure flexible VLAN tagging on the user ports with the data and voice VLANs as members
- D. Configure the IP phones to label voice traffic with the DSCP of code point and apply a BA classifier to the access ports to classify voce traffic

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 44

Exhibit.
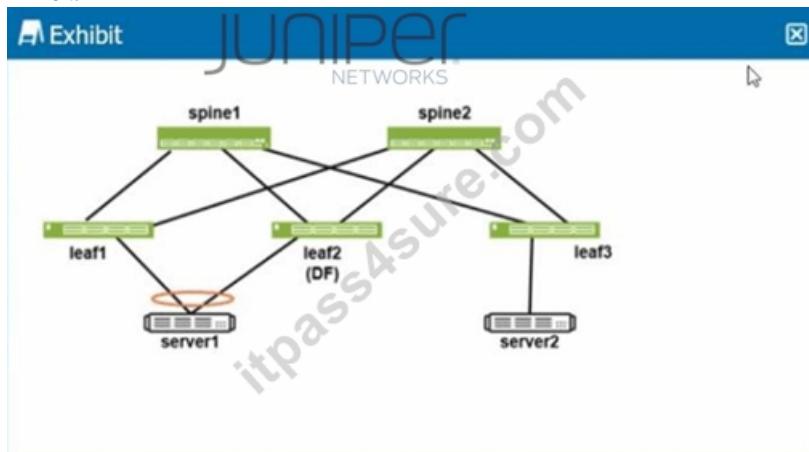

Referring to the exhibit. Ieaf2 is elected the designated forwarder

Which two statements are correct if server2 generates a broadcast frame*? (Choose two.)

- A. The broadcast frame will be forwarded to leaf1 and Ieaf2.
- B. Only Ieaf2 will forward the broadcast frame to server1
- C. The broadcast frame will not be forwarded to leaf1.
- D. Only leaf1 will forward the broadcast frame to server1.

Answer: A,B

Explanation:

The exhibit illustrates an EVPN-VXLAN fabric using multi-homing. Server1 is dual-homed to Leaf1 and Leaf2 using an Ethernet Segment Identifier (ESI) in an active-active or active-standby configuration. Server2 is single-homed to Leaf3.

In EVPN environments, specific mechanisms are used to prevent loops and duplicate traffic when dealing with Broadcast, Unknown Unicast, and Multicast (BUM) traffic:

* Broadcast Propagation (Option A): When Server2 (connected to Leaf3) generates a broadcast frame, Leaf3 encapsulates this traffic into a VXLAN tunnel and forwards it to all other VTEPs (Virtual Tunnel End Points) that participate in that specific Virtual Network Instance (VNI). Therefore, both Leaf1 and Leaf2 will receive the broadcast frame from the core fabric.

* Designated Forwarder (DF) Election (Option C): To prevent a multi-homed device (like Server1) from receiving duplicate copies of the same broadcast frame from multiple leaf switches, EVPN utilizes a Designated Forwarder (DF). For a given ESI, only one leaf switch is elected as the DF.

* The exhibit explicitly states that Leaf2 is the Designated Forwarder.

* According to the Junos EVPN implementation, only the DF is responsible for decapsulating BUM traffic received from the core and forwarding it to the local access segment.
* While Leaf1 receives the frame (Option A), it will see that it is not the DF for that segment and will drop the frame rather than forwarding it to Server1. This ensures Server1 receives exactly one copy of the broadcast, delivered by Leaf2.
* Option B is incorrect because in a standard ingress replication or multicast-based underlay, all VTEPs in the VNI receive the broadcast.
* Option D is incorrect because Leaf1 is the non-designated forwarder (non-DF) for this segment and is prohibited from forwarding BUM traffic to the ESI.

NEW QUESTION # 45

Which two multicast listener registration protocols are supported in the Junos operating system? (Choose two.)

- A. DVMRP
- B. PIM
- C. MLD
- D. IGMP

Answer: C,D

NEW QUESTION # 46
