NEW QUESTION # 29

How does SAP Fiori achieve the role-based design principle? Note: There are 2 correct answers to this question.

- A. By separating transactional and analytical apps in different business roles
- B. By decomposing big transactions into several discrete apps suited to the user's role
- C. By defining SAP Fiori apps that users can tailor exactly to their needs
- D. By giving end users exactly what they need for their work

Answer: B,D

Explanation:

Explanation

SAP Fiori achieves the role-based design principle by using the following methods:

By giving end users exactly what they need for their work, which means that SAP Fiori apps are tailored to the specific tasks and processes that users perform in their roles.

By decomposing big transactions into several discrete apps suited to the user's role, which means that SAP Fiori apps are focused on one or a few activities that users can complete quickly and easily.

NEW QUESTION # 31

How can you completely block a material for procurement in a plant? Note: There are 2 correct answers to this question.

- A. Use a relevant plant-specific material status in the material master
- B. Create an entry in the source list with a blocking indicator and NO supplier
- C. Create a blocking entry in the supplier master record
- D. Create a quota arrangement entry with a quantity of zero

Answer: A,B

Explanation:

Explanation

To completely block a material for procurement in a plant, you can use the following methods:

Create an entry in the source list with a blocking indicator and NO supplier, which means that you prevent the system from finding any valid source of supply for the material in the plant.

Use a relevant plant-specific material status in the material master, which means that you restrict the procurement transactions that are allowed for the material in the plant. For example, you can use material status 01 (Procurement blocked) to block all procurement transactions.
