CompTIA Data+ Certification Exam Sample Questions (Q291-Q296):

NEW QUESTION # 291

What is the maximum number of values that may be assigned to a single key in a key/value store?

- A. 0
- B. No maximum
- C. 1
- D. 2

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 292

A data analyst is using a two-tailed, independent t-test to determine whether the type of stretching, dynamic or static, has any influence on a dancer's flexibility. Which of the following is the alternative hypothesis?

- A. There is a difference in a dancer's flexibility between static and dynamic stretching.
- B. The means of the static and dynamic stretching groups do not differ from each other.
- C. The change in a dancer's flexibility is not equal to zero.
- D. A dancer's flexibility is improved through static stretching.

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 293

A database administrator needs to increase performance on a large dimension table. Which of the following is the best way to accomplish this task?

- A. Windowing
- B. Sampling
- C. Partitioning
- D. Sorting

Answer: C

Explanation:

Comprehensive and Detailed In-Depth

Improving the performance of large dimension tables in a database is crucial for efficient data retrieval and processing.

Partitioning: This technique involves dividing a large table into smaller, more manageable pieces called partitions. Each partition can be accessed and maintained separately, which enhances query performance and simplifies data management. Partitioning allows the database to read only the relevant partitions during a query, reducing the amount of data processed and speeding up response times.

Sampling: This involves analyzing a subset of data rather than the entire dataset. While useful for statistical analysis, it doesn't improve the performance of queries on the full dataset.

Windowing: This refers to functions that perform calculations across a set of table rows related to the current row, such as moving averages. It's useful for analytical purposes but doesn't inherently improve table performance.

Sorting: Organizing data in a specific order can aid in readability and certain query operations but doesn't significantly impact performance on large tables unless combined with indexing.

Therefore, partitioning is the most effective method to enhance performance on large dimension tables.

NEW QUESTION # 294

A data analyst is attempting to understand how ice cream consumption is affected by different attributes, such as cost, temperature, and income level. Which of the following regression analyses should the data analyst perform to understand this relationship?

- A. Logistic
- B. Cox
- C. Ordinary least squares

- D. Polynomial

Answer: C

Explanation:

Answer B) Ordinary least squares

Ordinary least squares (OLS) is a type of linear regression that is used to fit a regression model that describes the relationship between one or more predictor variables and a numeric response variable. Use when: The relationship between the predictor variable(s) and the response variable is reasonably linear. The response variable is a continuous numeric variable¹.

In this case, the data analyst is interested in understanding how ice cream consumption (the response variable) is affected by different attributes, such as cost, temperature, and income level (the predictor variables). Assuming that these variables have a linear relationship, OLS can be used to estimate the coefficients of the regression equation that best fits the data. OLS can also provide measures of goodness-of-fit, such as R-squared and adjusted R-squared, and test the significance of the coefficients using t-tests and F-tests².

Option A is incorrect, as logistic regression is used to fit a regression model that describes the relationship between one or more predictor variables and a binary response variable. Use when: The response variable is binary - it can only take on two values¹. Ice cream consumption is not a binary variable, but rather a continuous numeric variable.

Option C is incorrect, as Cox regression is used to fit a regression model that describes the relationship between one or more predictor variables and a survival time response variable. Use when: The response variable is the time until an event of interest occurs, such as death, failure, or recovery³. Ice cream consumption is not a survival time variable, but rather a continuous numeric variable.

Option D is incorrect, as polynomial regression is used to fit a regression model that describes the relationship between one or more predictor variables and a numeric response variable. Use when: The relationship between the predictor variable(s) and the response variable is non-linear¹. If there is no evidence of non-linearity in the data, polynomial regression may not be appropriate, as it may overfit the data and produce unreliable estimates.

NEW QUESTION # 295

A data set has the following values:

Name	City	State	Birthday	Date of birth
Cameron Smith	Chicago	IL	Nov 29	Null
Chloe Johnson	Detroit	MI	Dec 14	Dec 14
Blake Jones	San Antonio	TX	Jun 13	13-Jun

Which of the following is the best reason for cleansing the data?

- A. Invalid data
- B. Missing data
- C. Redundant data
- D. Data outliers

Answer: B

Explanation:

Comprehensive and Detailed In-Depth

In this dataset, we can see an issue with incomplete or missing data:

Cameron Smith's "Date of Birth" field is Null, which indicates missing data that needs to be filled in.

The format inconsistency in "Date of Birth" (e.g., "13-Jun" vs. "Dec 14") can also be problematic, requiring standardization.

Option A (Invalid data): Incorrect. The data is not necessarily invalid, but it is incomplete.

Option B (Redundant data): Incorrect. Redundant data means unnecessary duplication, which is not the case here.

Option C (Data outliers): Incorrect. Outliers refer to values that are extremely different from the rest of the dataset, which does not apply here.

Option D (Missing data): Correct. The "Date of Birth" field has missing values (e.g., "Null"), requiring data cleansing.
