A static report is a type of report that shows a snapshot of data at a specific point in time. A static report does not change or update automatically, unless the data source is refreshed or the report is regenerated. A static report is suitable for situations where the data does not change frequently or where historical data is needed for comparison or analysis. In this case, the data analyst is asked to create a sales report for the second-quarter

2020 board meeting, which will include a review of the business's performance through the second quarter.

The board meeting will be held on July 15, 2020, after the numbers are finalized. This means that the data analyst does not need to show real-time or dynamic data, but rather a fixed and accurate view of the sales data for the second quarter. Therefore, a static report would be the best way to meet this stakeholder requirement.

Therefore, the correct answer is A. References: What are Static Reports? | Sisense, Static vs Dynamic Reports
