16. Frage

In the event of a disaster that destroys the physical office site operations will be relocated to a temporary site.

- A. True
- B. False

Antwort: A

Begründung:

In the event of a disaster that destroys the physical office site operations will be relocated to a temporary site.

This is true because one of the recovery strategies for a disaster is to have an alternate site where the critical functions and processes can be resumed until the primary site is restored or replaced. The alternate site can be a pre-arranged location, such as a rented office space, a hotel, or another branch of the same organization, or a mobile facility, such as a trailer or a container. The alternate site should have the necessary equipment, systems, data, and resources to support the continuity of the business. Verified

17. Frage

Risk ownership must be clearly set out, documented and agreed with the individual owners at all levels of the operational risk management process.

- A. True
- B. False

Antwort: A

Begründung:

Explanation

Risk ownership must be clearly set out, documented and agreed with the individual owners at all levels of the operational risk management process. This is true because risk ownership is one of the key principles of business continuity management. Risk ownership means that each risk has a designated person who is responsible and accountable for its identification, assessment, treatment, monitoring, and reporting. Risk owners should have the authority and resources to manage their risks effectively and efficiently. Verified References:

18. Frage

Which of the following should NOT be released in a publicly released BCP?

- A. BIA results
- B. Contact lists
- C. Process flows
- D. All of the above

Antwort: B

Begründung:

In Business Continuity Planning (BCP), confidentiality and security of sensitive information are critical considerations when releasing details publicly. According to standard practices outlined in Business Continuity Professional guidelines, such as those from the Disaster Recovery Institute International (DRI) and ISO 22301, certain elements of a BCP should remain confidential to protect the organization and its stakeholders.

* Process flows: These describe how critical processes are maintained or recovered during a disruption.

While detailed process flows may be sensitive internally, a high-level overview can often be shared publicly to demonstrate preparedness without compromising operational security. Thus, they are not inherently prohibited from public release.

* Contact lists: These contain personal and operational details such as names, phone numbers, and roles of key personnel involved in the BCP. Releasing contact lists publicly poses significant risks, including privacy violations, potential targeting by malicious actors, and operational vulnerabilities. Best practices dictate that contact lists should remain confidential and restricted to authorized personnel only.

* BIA results: The Business Impact Analysis (BIA) identifies critical functions, recovery time objectives (RTOs), and potential impacts of disruptions. While detailed BIA results are sensitive, summary-level findings (e.g., critical processes identified without specific vulnerabilities) can sometimes be shared to show due diligence. However, this is not strictly prohibited in public releases if anonymized or generalized.

* All of the above: Since process flows and BIA results can be released in a controlled, summarized form, this option is incorrect. The key element that should unequivocally not be released is the contact list due to its sensitive nature.

Therefore, the correct answer is B. Contact lists, as it aligns with the principle of protecting sensitive personal and operational data in public disclosures.

19. Frage

What is the frequency of BCP testing for critical processes?

- A. As per calendar planned at beginning of the year
- B. Annually
- C. Half-yearly
- D. Quarterly

Antwort: B

Begründung:

The frequency of BCP testing for critical processes is a fundamental aspect of ensuring a plan remains effective and relevant. Business Continuity Professional standards, such as those from DRI International and ISO 22301, provide guidance on testing frequency based on the criticality of processes and organizational needs.

* Annually: Industry standards recommend that critical processes undergo comprehensive BCP testing at least once a year. This ensures that plans are validated, personnel are trained, and any gaps or changes in the business environment are addressed. Annual testing is considered a baseline requirement for maintaining resilience, particularly for critical functions that, if disrupted, could severely impact the organization.

* Quarterly: While more frequent testing (e.g., quarterly) may be appropriate for highly dynamic environments or specific high-risk processes, it is not a universal requirement for all critical processes.

Quarterly testing is typically reserved for specific scenarios or as part of a progressive testing strategy rather than a standard frequency.

* As per calendar planned at beginning of the year: This option implies a flexible schedule, but it lacks specificity and does not align with standardized recommendations. Testing should follow a defined frequency rather than an arbitrary calendar plan unless explicitly tied to a standard (e.g., annual).

* Half-yearly: Semi-annual testing (every six months) may be adopted by some organizations for additional assurance, but it exceeds the minimum standard requirement of annual testing for critical processes unless specified by organizational policy or regulatory mandates.

The verified answer, A. Annually, reflects the widely accepted minimum frequency for testing critical processes as per Business Continuity Professional guidelines. However, organizations may increase frequency based on risk assessments or regulatory requirements, though this is not the default expectation.

Testing and Exercising - Recommends annual testing as a minimum for critical processes.

20. Frage

Which certification centre provides the physical infrastructure?

- A. Facility
- B. Service

Antwort: A

Begründung:

A facility certification center is a center that provides the physical infrastructure for testing and certifying the functionality and performance of products, systems, or services.
