Salesforce Certified Slack Developer Sample Questions (Q122-Q127):

NEW QUESTION # 122

Your Slack app needs to verify the identity of incoming webhook requests.
What is the most secure method to implement this verification?

- A. Only accept requests that come from specific, pre-defined IP addresses
- B. Validate each request using Slack's signing secrets to verify its authenticity
- C. Assume all requests coming to the webhook URL are legitimate
- D. Use a simple shared secret for all webhook requests

Answer: B

Explanation:

Validate each request using Slack's signing secrets to verify its authenticity Validating each incoming webhook request using Slack's signing secrets is the most secure method to verify the authenticity of the request. This ensures that the request is indeed from Slack and not an impersonator.

Why not the other options:

*Assuming all incoming requests are legitimate exposes the app to potential malicious attacks.

*Using a simple shared secret may not provide sufficient security and can be easily compromised..

*Relying solely on pre-defined IP addresses does not guarantee the request's authenticity and can be bypassed by sophisticated attackers.

NEW QUESTION # 123

In developing a Slack app that handles sensitive user information, what is an essential security practice to prevent unauthorized data exposure?

- A. Use simple, easily memorable passwords for encrypting sensitive data
- B. Rely solely on Slack's built-in security features for data protection
- C. Limit access to sensitive data to only those components of the app that require it
- D. Store sensitive user information in public channels for easy access by the app

Answer: C

Explanation:

Limit access to sensitive data to only those components of the app that require it Limiting access to sensitive data to only the necessary components of the app is a crucial security practice. This principle of least privilege ensures that exposure of sensitive data is minimized and is accessible only where absolutely required.

Why not the other options:

*Storing sensitive information in public channels poses a high risk of unauthorized access.

*While Slack's built-in security features are robust, relying solely on them without additional security measures might not be sufficient for sensitive data.

*Using simple passwords for encryption undermines the security of sensitive data, making it vulnerable to unauthorized access.

NEW QUESTION # 124

Your Slack app needs to respond to messages containing specific keywords in real-time within any channel.

Which Events API subscription should you use?

- A. message.im
- B. message.channels
- C. team_join
- D. app_mention

Answer: B

Explanation:

message.channels message.channels is the correct subscription for the Events API to listen to messages in channels. It allows the app to monitor and respond to specific keywords in channel messages.

Why not the other options:

*App_mention is used when the app is mentioned in a message, not for all messages.

*Message.im is specific to direct messages (DMs) and not applicable to channel messages.

*Team_join is used to monitor when new members join the Slack workspace, not for message content.

NEW QUESTION # 125

Your organization intends to create a Slack app for internal time tracking and reporting. The app requires integration with existing HR software and user-friendly interfaces.

At what stage should a team be formed to collaborate on this Slack app?

- A. Only after the interface design is finalized
- B. Once the integration with the HR software is complete
- C. Right from the initial conceptualization and planning stage
- D. After the first round of testing with a select user group

Answer: C

Explanation:

Right from the initial conceptualization and planning stage Forming a collaborative team from the initial conceptualization and planning stage is critical. This ensures that the app's design, functionality, and integration with existing HR software are thought through with inputs from all relevant stakeholders, leading to a more effective and user-centric solution.

Why not the other options:

*Waiting until the interface design is finalized might lead to rework if the design does not meet integration or functional requirements.

*Completing the integration first may result in a disconnect between the app's functionality and user interface needs.

*Waiting until after the first round of testing could lead to significant changes late in the development process, increasing time and resource expenditure.

NEW QUESTION # 126

In a Slack organization, who is generally authorized to generate a token to use APIs for org-wide administration tasks?

- A. Users with a specific channel-based role
- B. External consultants with temporary access
- C. Any user within the organization
- D. Organization Owner or Admin

Answer: D

Explanation:

Organization Owner or Admin For org-wide administration tasks in Slack, typically, the token must be generated by a user with the role of Organization Owner or Admin. These roles have the appropriate level of access and permissions required to manage and automate tasks across the entire organization in Slack.

Why not the other options:

*Not all users within the organization will have the necessary permissions for this level of administrative control.

*Specific channel-based roles do not usually include permissions for organization-wide administrative tasks.

*External consultants with temporary access are unlikely to be granted permissions to generate tokens for org-wide API automation.
