--- releasing the final report. -

Senior management decides to adopt a conservative working capital policy. What would be the expected result for the organization?

- A. Higher level of profitability
- B. Higher level of risk
- C. High level of liquidity
- D. Low levels of inventory

Answer: C

Explanation:

A conservative working capital policy means maintaining higher current assets relative to current liabilities (e.g., higher cash balances, larger inventories). This increases liquidity but reduces profitability because funds are tied up in low-yield assets. Therefore, the expected result is high liquidity (Option C).

NEW QUESTION # 96

- C. Initiate an assurance engagement on the unresolved issues.
- D. Document the issue in the audit file and follow up until the issues are resolved.

Answer: A

NEW QUESTION # 97

Which of the following sources of testimonial evidence would be considered the most reliable regarding whether a process is effectively performed according to its design?

- A. Two or more people that work in the area
- B. The person responsible for performing the task
- C. The manager that wrote the steps to be followed
- D. The supervisor in charge of the process

Answer: D

Explanation:

The most reliable source of testimonial evidence regarding whether a process is effectively performed according to its design would be the supervisor in charge of the process. This is because supervisors are typically responsible for overseeing the day-to-day operations and ensuring that processes are followed correctly. They have a comprehensive understanding of the process and can provide valuable insights into its effectiveness and adherence to design. The reliability of evidence increases with the proximity of the individual to the process in question and their role in ensuring compliance and performance.
