NEW QUESTION # 173

The Youngblood Company is too small to have its own health insurance plan, so it joins several other businesses in a combined plan. This is known as a(n)

- A. administrative services only plan.
- B. third party administrator plan.
- C. health purchasing alliance.
- D. partially selffunded plan.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Explanation: The Youngblood Company's arrangement is known as a health purchasing alliance. This gives smaller businesses more purchasing power and leverage in negotiations with health insurance providers. In an administrative services only plan, the employer creates a claim fund and then hires an insurance company to manage it. In a third party administrator plan, a business besides the employer or the insurance company handles claims. In a partially selffunded plan, employers only provide a certain amount of coverage. This type of plan ensures that a small business will not be ruined by a single large claim.

Answer: A

Explanation:

If the leave is foreseeable but the employee fails to provide his employer with appropriate advance notice, for how long after the start of the leave may the employer delay the employee's FMLA coverage?

- A. 60 days
- B. 15 days
- C. 45 days
- D. 30 days

Answer: D

Explanation:

Explanation: If the leave is foreseeable but the employee fails to provide his employer with appropriate advance notice, the employer may delay FMLA coverage for 30 days. The employer may, of course, delay coverage for less than 30 days-so 15 days is an option-but the employer has a full 30 days.
