PMI PMP Exam Certification Path

A PMP certification is a great way to demonstrate that you have the sufficient skills and comprehensive knowledge needed to be an effective manager. To get this certification, individuals need to take the exam offered by PMI in order for them to be allocated a certificate. PMI offers two types of certifications: The PMP and CAPM exam. These exams are taken on-site or online, and they both require passing a 50% or higher score in order for the exam taker to be certified. While the PMP certification is the more difficult of the two, it also has many perks that make it worthwhile for those who want to pursue management positions. There are several requirements needed to take this exam, including a minimum of two years of management project experience, either with an organization in the private or public sector, and a minimum of three years post-graduation in management project. There are some roles of PMI which are also described in PMP Dumps that, the PMP test can only be taken once every five years; if an individual does not meet this requirement within this timeframe, they are required to re-take the test again.

Essential Facts: Exam Format and Structure

Within the certification process, the applicants need to submit an application on the official website confirming their education and professional experience. Once this application is reviewed by the PMI, one receives a notification by e-mail. After that, the learners can proceed with paying and scheduling the qualifying test. You can take the PMP exam at a testing center as a computer-based option for $405 if you are already a PMI member and $555 if you are not a PMI member.

The PMI PMP Certification Exam consists of approximately 200 multiple-choice questions that the candidates need to solve. About 25 questions are usually used as the pilot ones and are never counted towards the final score. These pilot questions are placed randomly throughout the exam, making it hard for the students to identify which ones are they. The test is known to be available for the individuals in the English language.
