NEW QUESTION # 44

A Solution Architect is designing a high-scale monitoring solution. The requirement is to increase the data collection frequency for a specific set of "Mission Critical" VMs from 5 minutes to 1 minute to catch rapid performance usage spikes.

Target Scope

Object: Group "Mission-Critical-Apps" (500 VMs)

Current Policy: Default Policy (Inherited)

Action Taken

The architect creates a new Policy "1-Min-Collection" and overrides the vCenter Adapter collection interval to 1 minute.

The policy is assigned to the "Mission-Critical-Apps" group.

What is a potential negative architectural impact of this configuration change?

- A. It forces the vCenter Server to reboot to apply the new agent schedule.
- B. It requires a dedicated Cloud Proxy for every 100 VMs, making the design too expensive.
- C. It will automatically disable "Capacity Forecasting" for those VMs because the capacity engine only works on 5-minute intervals.
- D. It significantly increases the storage IOPs and disk space usage on the VCF Operations analytics nodes, potentially affecting global performance if not sized correctly.

Answer: D

User Context

User: jdoe

Group: Operations-L1

Role Assigned: "ReadOnly"

Scenario

Collector-A: Pinned to vCenter-Prod (High Load)

Collector-B: Pinned to vCenter-Test (Low Load)

Alert

Collector-A is dropping flows due to overload (CPU 100%).

Collector-B is idle (CPU 10%).

What is the immediate remediation to balance the load without deploying new hardware?

- A. Disable IPFIX on the Distributed Switch for vCenter-Prod.
- B. Delete Collector-A; the system will auto-magic the load to
- C. Enable "Distributed Collection" or manually re-pin some of the data sources (e.g., move vCenter-Prod to Collector-B, or split if supported/granular) to utilize the idle capacity of Collector-B. Or, more likely, deploy a second collector for Prod and cluster/group them if the product version supports collector grouping/clustering for a single source. (Legacy Answer Manually re-balance sources).
- D. Increase the polling interval on vCenter-Prod to 60 minutes.

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 47

An organization has a policy that "Powered Off VMs" should only be deleted if they have been powered off for more than 30 days.

VCF Operations is currently recommending deletion after only 7 days.

How does the administrator align the tool with the corporate policy?
