NEW QUESTION # 171
You have an Azure subscription that contains a virtual machine named VM1 and uses Azure Defender. Azure Defender has automatic provisioning enabled.

You need to create a custom alert suppression rule that will supress false positive alerts for suspicious use of PowerShell on VM1.
What should you do first?

- A. On VM1 trigger a PowerShell alert.
- B. From Azure Security Center, add a workflow automation.
- C. On VM1, run the Get-MPThreatCatalog cmdlet.
- D. From Azure Security Center, export the alerts to a Log Analytics workspace.

Answer: A

Explanation:
To create a custom alert suppression rule in Microsoft Defender for Cloud (formerly Azure Security Center), you must first have an existing alert to base the suppression rule on. Suppression rules can only be configured for alert types that have already been triggered.
According to Microsoft's Defender for Cloud documentation:
"You can create suppression rules for alerts that you've already received. To create the rule, locate the specific alert in Security alerts, open it, and then choose 'Create suppression rule' from the alert page." Therefore, before you can create a suppression rule for suspicious use of PowerShell on VM1, you must first trigger that alert by performing (or simulating) the action that causes it - in this case, generating a PowerShell activity alert on VM1.
The other options are incorrect:
* (A) Workflow automation is used to respond automatically to alerts, not suppress them.
* (B) Get-MPThreatCatalog retrieves malware threat details from Windows Defender, not alert data from Defender for Cloud.
* (D) Exporting alerts to Log Analytics is for analysis, not suppression configuration.
Correct answer: C. On VM1, trigger a PowerShell alert
