- A. False
- B. True

Answer: A

Information may be defined as "pieces of raw, unanalyzed data that identify persons, organizations, evidence, events, or illustrate processes that indicate the incidence of a criminal event or witness or evidence of a criminal event."

- A. False
- B. True

Answer: B

Explanation:

Raw data and observations collected during investigations are classified as information. When properly analyzed, structured, and contextualized, this information transforms into intelligence, which is actionable for investigations and decision-making. Understanding this difference is critical in cyber intelligence investigations, where data mining and OSINT techniques play a crucial role.

- A. A local bar
- B. A place to find a date
- C. A company that holds your money in good faith while an item is shipped
