- A. User populations that vary in size on a seasonal basis.
- B. User populations which steadily increase in size.
- C. User populations that are of fixed size.
- D. User populations that vary and are unpredictable.

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 294

Which of the following can be used to achieve automation, environment consistency, and standardization of computer resources in a cloud environment?

- A. Content management system
- B. Automation
- C. Service-oriented architecture
- D. Infrastructure as code

Answer: D

Explanation:

Infrastructure as code (IaC) is the ability to provision and support your computing infrastructure using code instead of manual processes and settings¹. IaC can be used to achieve automation, environment consistency, and standardization of computer resources in a cloud environment, as it eliminates the need for developers to manually configure and manage servers, operating systems, database connections, storage, and other infrastructure elements every time they want to develop, test, or deploy a software application². IaC also enables developers to easily duplicate, track, and version their infrastructure, and to avoid configuration errors and drifts that can cause deployment failures². IaC is an essential DevOps practice, as it enables faster and more reliable software delivery lifecycles². NEW QUESTION # 295

A company wants to save on cloud storage costs for data that does not need to be accessible in a timely manner. Which of the following storage types would be the BEST option?

- A. Block
- B. Object
- C. Tape
- D. Cold

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 296

A company wants to process a batch job in a faster, cost-effective manner. Which of the following is the BEST solution?

- A. Utilize spot instances.
- B. Add storage.
- C. Increase CPU usage.
- D. Implement right-sizing.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Spot instances are cloud computing resources that are available at a lower price than the regular on-demand price, but can be interrupted and reclaimed by the cloud provider at any time¹. Spot instances are ideal for batch jobs that have flexible completion times and can tolerate failures, as they can provide faster and cheaper computing power than regular instances². Spot instances can also be combined with other pricing options, such as on-demand or reserved instances, to optimize the performance and cost of batch jobs³.

Implementing right-sizing is a technique of adjusting the size and type of cloud resources to match the actual needs and usage patterns of an application⁴. Right-sizing can help reduce the cost and improve the efficiency of cloud resources, but it does not necessarily make the batch job faster, as it depends on the workload and demand of the job.

Increasing CPU usage is a measure of how much processing power is being consumed by an application or a system. Increasing CPU usage can make the batch job faster, but it can also increase the cost and risk of overloading the system. Increasing CPU usage is not a solution by itself, but rather a consequence of using more or larger cloud resources.

Adding storage is a process of increasing the amount or capacity of data that can be stored in the cloud. Adding storage can help store more data or backup data for the batch job, but it does not directly affect the speed or cost of the batch job, as it depends on the type and performance of the storage service.
