WGU VPC2Data-Driven Decision MakingC207 Sample Questions (Q89-Q94):

NEW QUESTION # 89

Which tool sorts data into categories to help teams identify the most significant factors that contribute the most to problems?

- A. Flowchart
- B. Cause chart
- C. Run chart
- D. Pareto chart

Answer: D

Explanation:

A Pareto chart sorts data into categories and ranks them by frequency or impact. In data-driven decision making, this helps teams focus on the most significant contributors to a problem.

The chart combines bars and a cumulative line to highlight which factors account for the largest share of issues. This aligns with the Pareto principle and supports prioritization of improvement efforts.

Run charts track data over time, flowcharts describe processes, and cause charts are not a standard quality tool. Therefore, the correct answer is C.

NEW QUESTION # 90

Which graphical display is used to examine the distribution of a data set with quartiles?

- A. Pareto chart
- B. Boxplot
- C. Scatterplot
- D. Bivariate chart

Answer: B

Explanation:

A boxplot is specifically designed to display the distribution of a dataset using quartiles. In data-driven decision making, boxplots visually summarize data through the minimum, first quartile, median, third quartile, and maximum.

Boxplots are useful for identifying spread, central tendency, skewness, and potential outliers. Scatterplots and bivariate charts analyze relationships between variables, while Pareto charts rank categorical data by frequency.

Because quartiles are the defining feature of a boxplot, the correct answer is C.

NEW QUESTION # 91

A company's marketing team tells an analyst that fewer customers are opening emails in the recent email campaign. The analyst interviews a few marketing coordinators and discovers changes were made to the email subject line between the earlier successful email campaign and the recent one. The analyst then uses a statistical technique to compare the email open rates for each campaign. Which step does the comparison of the email open rate represent in the plan-do-check-act cycle?

- A. Check
- B. Do
- C. Plan
- D. Act

Answer: A

Explanation:

The plan-do-check-act cycle is a continuous improvement framework used in quality management and process improvement. In this scenario, the comparison of email open rates represents the check stage. After identifying a possible cause of the problem, the analyst uses a statistical technique to evaluate results and determine whether the changes in subject lines are associated with lower open rates. The check step is where performance is measured, reviewed, and compared against expectations or prior outcomes. The plan stage would involve deciding what change or test to make. The do stage would involve implementing the campaign or the revised subject line. The act stage would involve standardizing the successful change or making further adjustments based on the findings. Because the analyst is examining and comparing the results of the campaigns, this clearly aligns with the check phase. Therefore, the correct answer is check.

NEW QUESTION # 92

What results from starting an analysis with flawed data?
Choose 2 answers.

- A. More time is spent managing data than analyzing data.
- B. Spreadsheets must be used to increase the likelihood of analyzing the flawed data.
- C. Missing data tend to skew the results of the analysis.
- D. Data must be put in a table or a chart so that errors can be more easily detected.

Answer: A,C

Explanation:

Starting an analysis with flawed data significantly undermines the effectiveness of data-driven decision making. One major consequence is that more time is spent managing data than analyzing data. Analysts must devote substantial effort to cleaning, validating, and correcting errors before meaningful analysis can occur, delaying insights and increasing costs.

Another critical result is that missing data tend to skew the results of the analysis. Incomplete data can distort averages, trends, and statistical relationships, leading to biased conclusions and unreliable decisions. This is especially problematic in predictive and inferential analytics, where assumptions about data completeness are essential.

Using spreadsheets or placing data in charts does not inherently result from flawed data, nor does it resolve data quality issues.

While visualization can help identify errors, it is not a direct outcome of starting with flawed data.

Data-driven decision making emphasizes that poor-quality input leads to poor-quality output. Ensuring data accuracy and completeness before analysis is essential for producing valid insights. Therefore, the correct answers are B and D.

NEW QUESTION # 93

Research data indicate 95% confidence in a study in which subjects who were shown a product advertisement exhibited brand awareness compared to a control group who did not see the advertisement.

- A. Ninety-five percent of the subjects liked the brand.
- B. The advertisement was effective in increasing sales.
- C. Five percent of the subjects did not like the advertisement.
- D. The advertisement was effective in building brand awareness.

Answer: D
