A disaster can also be declared for an illness pandemic where a significant portion of employees are sick.

- A. True
- B. False

Answer: A

Explanation:

A disaster can also be declared for an illness pandemic where a significant portion of employees are sick. This is true because an illness pandemic is a type of natural disaster that can affect an organization's ability to continue its normal operations. An illness pandemic can cause absenteeism, reduced productivity, increased costs, supply chain disruptions, customer dissatisfaction, or regulatory compliance issues. Therefore, an organization may need to declare a disaster and activate its business continuity and disaster recovery plan if an illness pandemic impacts its critical functions and processes beyond an acceptable level. #### NEW QUESTION # 29

Damage assessment includes all but which of the following steps?

- A. Estimate the time it will take to restore critical business functions.
- B. Identifying the affected business functions.
- C. Having the insurance company declare the total extent of the damages.
- D. Evaluating the time to restore operations and if greater than the MTD, a disaster should be declared and BCP enacted

Answer: C

Explanation:

Explanation

Damage assessment is the process of evaluating the extent and severity of the damage caused by a disruption to an organization's facilities, equipment, systems, data, records, or personnel. It includes identifying the affected business functions and processes, estimating the time it will take to restore them to normal or acceptable levels of operation, and evaluating whether the recovery time exceeds the maximum tolerable downtime (MTD) for each function or process. If so, a disaster should be declared and the business continuity plan should be activated. Having the insurance company declare the total extent of the damages is not part of the damage assessment process, as it may take longer than the MTD and may not reflect the operational impact of the damage.
