NEW QUESTION # 60

- A. Members of the workforce understand their roles in protecting data privacy
- B. No privacy incidents have been reported in the last year
- C. HR has made privacy training an annual mandate for the organization_
- D. Recent audits have no findings or recommendations related to data privacy

Answer: A

Explanation:
The best indication of a highly effective privacy training program is that members of the workforce understand their roles in protecting data privacy, because this shows that the training program has successfully raised the awareness and knowledge of the workforce on the importance, principles and practices of data privacy, and how they can contribute to the organization's privacy objectives and compliance. According to ISACA, one of the key elements of a privacy training program is to define and communicate the roles and responsibilities of the workforce in relation to data privacy1. Members of the workforce who understand their roles in protecting data privacy are more likely to follow the privacy policies and procedures, report any privacy incidents or issues, and support the privacy culture of the organization2. Recent audits have no findings or recommendations related to data privacy, no privacy incidents have been reported in the last year, and HR has made privacy training an annual mandate for the organization are not as reliable as members of the workforce understand their roles in protecting data privacy, as they do not necessarily reflect the effectiveness of the privacy training program, but rather the performance of other factors such as audit processes, incident management systems, or HR policies.

NEW QUESTION # 61
Which of the following BEST illustrates privacy by design in the development of a consumer mobile application?

- A. The application requires consent before sharing locations.
- B. The application only stores data for 24 hours.
- C. The application shares personal information upon request.
- D. The application only stores data locally.

Answer: A

Explanation:
Privacy by design is an approach that embeds privacy principles and considerations into the design and development of products, services, systems, and processes that involve personal dat a. Privacy by design aims to protect the privacy and security of the data subjects, as well as to comply with the applicable privacy laws and regulations. One of the key principles of privacy by design is to obtain the consent and choice of the data subjects regarding the collection, use, and disclosure of their personal data. Therefore, the best example of privacy by design in the development of a consumer mobile application is to require consent before sharing locations, as this gives the data subjects control and transparency over their personal data. The other options are not as effective or sufficient as requiring consent before sharing locations, as they do not address the principle of consent and choice, or they may violate other privacy principles or requirements.

NEW QUESTION # 62
An organization has initiated a project to enhance privacy protections by improving its information security controls. Which of the following is the MOST useful action to help define the scope of the project?

- A. Identify databases that contain personal data
- B. Review proposed privacy rules that govern the processing of personal data
- C. Identify databases that do not have encryption in place.
- D. Review recent audit reports on the internal control environment

Answer: B

Explanation:
Explanation
Reviewing proposed privacy rules that govern the processing of personal data is the most useful action to help define the scope of the project because it helps identify the legal and regulatory requirements, the data protection principles and the privacy objectives that the information security controls need to support.

Reviewing recent audit reports, identifying databases that contain personal data or do not have encryption in place are helpful actions to assess the current state of privacy and security, but they do not provide a clear direction for the project scope.

NEW QUESTION # 63

Which of the following vulnerabilities is MOST effectively mitigated by enforcing multi-factor authentication to obtain access to personal information?

- A. Vulnerabilities existing in authentication pages
- B. Organizations using weak encryption to transmit data
- C. End users forgetting their passwords
- D. End users using weak passwords

Answer: D

Explanation:

One of the most common vulnerabilities that can compromise the access to personal information is end users using weak passwords. Weak passwords are passwords that are easy to guess, crack, or steal, such as passwords that are short, simple, common, or reused. Weak passwords can allow unauthorized or malicious parties to gain access to personal information and cause privacy breaches, leaks, or misuse. Multi-factor authentication is an effective way to mitigate this vulnerability, as it requires end users to provide more than one piece of evidence to verify their identity, such as something they know (e.g., password), something they have (e.g., token), or something they are (e.g., biometric). Multi-factor authentication makes it harder for attackers to bypass the authentication process and access personal information. Reference: : CDPSE Review Manual (Digital Version), page 107
