IBM MQ v9.4 Administrator - Professional Sample Questions (Q256-Q261):

NEW QUESTION # 256

If an IBM MQ message must be processed exactly once, ensuring no duplication or loss during failure scenarios, which combination of message properties and MQ capabilities is most appropriate to implement?

- A. Messages sent to temporary queues without acknowledgment
- B. Non-persistent messages with asynchronous delivery
- C. Persistent messages within a unit of work (transaction) committed to the queue manager
- D. Alias queues with manual redirection

Answer: C

Explanation:

Using persistent messages with MQ transactions ensures exactly-once delivery semantics. If a failure occurs before the transaction commit, the message is not lost or duplicated.

NEW QUESTION # 257

In scenarios where multiple applications need to process messages from the same queue simultaneously, which IBM MQ feature ensures that messages are distributed among consumers without duplication, and how does it maintain data integrity?

- A. Transactional queues automatically discard messages after the first consumer reads them.
- B. Clustering replicates messages to all queue managers, which ensures each consumer processes every message.
- C. Shared queues allow all consumers to read every message, which may lead to duplication.
- D. Queue Grouping distributes messages among multiple consumers so that each message is consumed by only one application, maintaining message integrity.

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 258

When implementing a scenario where multiple applications need to process the same message independently without interfering with each other, which IBM MQ messaging pattern or configuration is most suitable to achieve this behavior?

- A. Publish/Subscribe model with topics
- B. Clustered local queues with round-robin
- C. Point-to-point model with a single queue
- D. Dead-letter queue handling

Answer: A

Explanation:

The Publish/Subscribe model allows messages to be published to a topic, and multiple subscribers can receive copies independently, ensuring non-interfering processing.

NEW QUESTION # 259

When designing a workload distribution strategy where multiple queues across different queue managers need to process incoming requests from a common entry point, which IBM MQ feature enables intelligent routing of requests to available queues without requiring the application to know their specific names?

- A. Alias Queues
- B. Queue Manager Mirroring
- C. Cluster Queue Resolution
- D. Queue Depth Balancing

Answer: C

Explanation:

Cluster Queue Resolution allows MQ to automatically route messages to any available queue in the cluster, simplifying application design and ensuring scalability.

NEW QUESTION # 260

While implementing IBM MQ clustering across multiple queue managers, what is the significance of a Full Repository Queue Manager compared to a Partial Repository Queue Manager?

- A. Full Repository only manages local queues while Partial Repository manages remote queues
- B. Full Repository stores complete cluster object definitions while Partial Repository keeps only necessary subset
- C. Full Repository eliminates the need for channels while Partial Repository requires them
- D. Full Repository is dedicated only to message persistence while Partial Repository handles real-time delivery

Answer: B

Explanation:

In clustering, Full Repository Queue Managers maintain all cluster object definitions, while Partial Repositories store only those objects required for their own operation.
