NEW QUESTION # 183
Which is the most accurate type of biometrics?

- A. Fingerprint.
- B. Facial recognition.
- C. DNA
- D. Voiceprint.

Answer: C

Explanation:
Different types of biometrics offer varying levels of accuracy. Here's why DNA is considered the most accurate:
* Uniqueness: DNA is unique to each individual (except identical twins), making it the most precise form of biometric identification.
* Reliability: DNA analysis has a very high accuracy rate in distinguishing between individuals, with negligible chances of false matches.
* Comparative Accuracy: While fingerprints (C) and facial recognition (D) are also accurate, they are more susceptible to errors and can be affected by external factors like changes in physical appearance or quality of the captured image. Voiceprints (B) can be influenced by background noise and voice changes.
* Use Cases: DNA is often used in forensic science due to its accuracy in identifying individuals with high certainty.
Reference: The IAPP Information Privacy Technologist documentation highlights DNA as the most accurate form of biometrics due to its uniqueness and reliability.

NEW QUESTION # 184
An organization is launching a new online subscription-based publication. As the service is not aimed at children, users are asked for their date of birth as part of the of the sign-up process. The privacy technologist suggests it may be more appropriate ask if an individual is over 18 rather than requiring they provide a date of birth. What kind of threat is the privacy technologist concerned about?

- A. Minimization.
- B. Interference.
- C. Identification.
- D. Insecurity.

Answer: A

Explanation:
Data minimization is a principle of data protection that dictates only collecting personal data that is necessary for the specified purpose. By asking if an individual is over 18, rather than collecting their full date of birth, the organization adheres to the principle of data minimization, reducing the amount of personal information collected and thereby lowering the risk of identification and misuse of personal data. This approach aligns with the principles set forth in data protection regulations such as the General Data Protection Regulation (GDPR).

NEW QUESTION # 185
SCENARIO
Clean-Q is a company that offers house-hold and office cleaning services. The company receives requests from consumers via their website and telephone, to book cleaning services. Based on the type and size of service, Clean-Q then contracts individuals that are registered on its resource database - currently managed in-house by Clean-Q IT Support. Because of Clean-Q's business model, resources are contracted as needed instead of permanently employed.
The table below indicates some of the personal information Clean-Q requires as part of its business operations:

Category	Types of Personal Information
Customers	Name, address (location), contact information, billing information
Resources (contracted)	Name, contact information, banking details, address

Clean-Q has an internal employee base of about 30 people. A recent privacy compliance exercise has been conducted to align employee data management and human resource functions with applicable data protection regulation. Therefore, the Clean-Q permanent employee base is not included as part of this scenario.
With an increase in construction work and housing developments, Clean-Q has had an influx of requests for cleaning services. The demand has overwhelmed Clean-Q's traditional supply and demand system that has caused some overlapping bookings.
Ina business strategy session held by senior management recently, Clear-Q invited vendors to present potential solutions to their current operational issues. These vendors included Application developers and Cloud-Q's solution providers, presenting their proposed solutions and platforms.
The Managing Director opted to initiate the process to integrate Clean-Q's operations with a cloud solution (LeadOps) that will provide the following solution one single online platform: A web interface that Clean-Q accesses for the purposes of resource and customer management. This would entail uploading resource and customer information.
A customer facing web interface that enables customers to register, manage and submit cleaning service requests online.
A resource facing web interface that enables resources to apply and manage their assigned jobs.
An online payment facility for customers to pay for services.
Considering that LeadOps will host/process personal information on behalf of Clean-Q remotely, what is an appropriate next step for Clean-Q senior management to assess LeadOps' appropriateness?

- A. Involve the Information Security team to understand in more detail the types of services and solutions LeadOps is proposing.
- B. Nothing at this stage as the Managing Director has made a decision.
- C. Determine if any Clean-Q competitors currently use LeadOps as a solution.
- D. Obtain a legal opinion from an external law firm on contracts management.

Answer: A
