IIA Essentials of Internal Auditing Sample Questions (Q260-Q265):

NEW QUESTION # 260

After several years in the engineering department, an engineer was transferred to the internal audit department. One month later, the new auditor was assigned to an assurance engagement for the engineering department. When the auditor's former engineering supervisor suggested a change in the sample selection method, the auditor consulted with the audit supervisor. They determined that the suggested method would not be as representative and that the original selection method should be used.

In this situation, the auditor:

- A. Does not have independent organizational status since the auditor recently transferred from the engineering department.
- B. Does not have objectivity since the auditor recently transferred from the engineering department.
- C. Maintained an independent mental attitude and is therefore objective.
- D. Has subordinated professional judgment, and objectivity is therefore impaired.

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 261

NEW QUESTION # 264

Which of the following is a control that is used mainly to check the integrity of data entered into a business application, whether the data is entered directly by staff, remotely by a business partner, or through a web-enabled application?

- A. Integrity control
- B. General IT control.
- C. Processing control.
- D. Input control

Answer: D

Explanation:

Input controls are designed to ensure the accuracy, completeness, and validity of data entered into a business application. These controls can include validation checks, input masks, and error detection methods that verify data at the point of entry. Whether data is entered directly by staff, remotely by business partners, or through web-enabled applications, input controls help maintain the integrity of the data by preventing errors and unauthorized input. These controls are crucial in maintaining data quality and integrity in any business application. References:
