Theme

The text "Responsibility of the Youth in Nation-Building" by Quaid-e-Azam Muhammad Ali Jinnah revolves around the central theme of nation-building through responsible citizenship and purposeful education. Addressing young graduates, Jinnah urges them to recognise the significance of living in a free, independent state and the responsibilities that come with it. He emphasises the importance of discipline, unity, and hard work, encouraging youth to move away from the colonial mentality of seeking only government jobs and instead explore opportunities in fields such as commerce, industry, law, and technical education. The speech highlights the need for constructive action in a time of national development and warns against complacency, exploitation, and internal threats. Overall, the message calls on students to use their education not only for personal gain but also to serve the nation with sincerity, selflessness, and vision.
