- D. Child case is created for each parent case in Trigger.new.

Answer: D

NEW QUESTION # 208

Universal Containers decided to transition from Classic to Lightning Experience. They asked a developer to replace a JavaScript button that was being used to create records with prepopulated values.

What can the developer use to accomplish this?

- A. Quick Actions
- B. Record triggered flows
- C. Validation rules
- D. Apex triggers

Answer: A

Explanation:

To replace a JavaScript button from Salesforce Classic that creates records with prepopulated values in Lightning Experience, the developer can use:

Option A: Quick Actions

Quick Actions (Specifically, Object-Specific Actions):

Quick Actions allow users to perform actions, such as creating or updating records, from a record page or global context.

Prepopulating Fields:

You can predefine field values in Quick Actions using predefined values or by utilizing Lightning Component actions.

Reference:

"You can set predefined values for fields on the action layout, which lets you specify default values for the new record."

- Salesforce Help: Predefined Field Values for Quick Actions

Why Other Options Are Less Suitable:

Option B: Validation Rules

Validation rules enforce data integrity but do not create records or prepopulate values.

Option C: Record-Triggered Flows

Flows can automate processes but are not a direct replacement for buttons that create records with prepopulated values from the UI.

Option D: Apex Triggers

Triggers execute logic in response to DML events but are not used to create UI components or replace buttons.

Conclusion:

Quick Actions are the recommended way to replicate the functionality of JavaScript buttons in Lightning Experience.
