NEW QUESTION # 472

Which of the following actions typically would be considered part of a reverse logistics strategy?

- A. Offering a discount on new purchases when used products are returned

- B. Manufacturing products in batches consistent with full-truckload shipments
- C. Batching returns of defective components to the suppliers
- D. Reducing the amount of packaging material used in shipping

Answer: A

Explanation:

* Context: Reverse logistics involves the process of moving goods from their final destination for the purpose of capturing value or proper disposal.

* Options Breakdown:

* A. Offering a discount on new purchases when used products are returned: Encourages the return of used products for recycling or remanufacturing.

* B. Reducing the amount of packaging material used in shipping: This is a sustainability effort, not specifically reverse logistics.

* C. Manufacturing products in batches consistent with full-truckload shipments: Relates to production and shipping efficiency.

* D. Batching returns of defective components to the suppliers: Part of reverse logistics but less common than offering incentives for returns.

* Correct Answer Justification: Incentivizing customers to return used products is a common reverse logistics strategy aimed at reclaiming products for recycling or refurbishment.
