CIPS Managing Ethical Procurement and Supply (L5M5) Sample Questions (Q58-Q63):

NEW QUESTION # 58

Fresh Delight, a natural fruit juice company, sources fruit from Citrus Co. under a contract with a "time of the essence" and "retention of title" clause. Citrus Co. delivers fruit every Monday, but Fresh Delight has failed to pay for the last two deliveries. Claiming ownership under the retention of title clause, Citrus Co. attempts to reclaim the most recent delivery. Does Citrus Co. have a valid legal claim to retrieve the goods despite having delivered them?

- A. Yes - the product still belongs to Citrus Co
- B. Yes - the product can be reclaimed under any circumstances
- C. No - if the delivery was made on time, it belongs to Fresh Delight
- D. No - if Fresh Delight signed for the delivery, Citrus Co. has no right to reclaim it

Answer: A

Explanation:

Choice A- The retention of title clause in the contract means Citrus Co. retains ownership of the goods until Fresh Delight has fully paid for them. Even though the goods were delivered, the failure to pay gives Citrus Co. the right to reclaim them. Ownership (title) does not pass to Fresh Delight until payment is made. Correct answer.

Incorrect answer:

Choice B- While the retention of title clause allows Citrus Co. to reclaim the goods in this case, this right is not absolute. The clause must align with relevant legal frameworks, such as insolvency laws, which may limit Citrus Co.'s ability to reclaim goods in certain situations. Thus, goods cannot always be reclaimed "under any circumstances." Choice C- Signing for delivery does not override a retention of title clause. Even if Fresh Delight accepted and signed for the delivery, the ownership of the goods remains with Citrus Co. until payment is received.

Choice D- Timely delivery has no bearing on the ownership of the goods when a retention of title clause is in place. Ownership is tied to the payment, not the delivery schedule. Hence, Citrus Co. can still reclaim the goods if payment hasn't been made.

NEW QUESTION # 59

SA8000 measures an organisation's social accountability. Which of the following is a disadvantage of this standard?

- A. It is only applicable to larger organisations
- B. It is industry specific
- C. It is not recognised in some countries

- D. It requires a management system which can be costly to implement

Answer: D

Explanation:

Comprehensive and Detailed Explanation From Exact Extract of Documents:

SA8000 is an internationally recognised certification standard for social accountability. It requires organisations to adopt management systems to monitor compliance with social standards, including child labour elimination, safe working conditions, and fair wages. According to the L5M5 study guide (p.264), one disadvantage is the cost of implementing and maintaining the management system, which can be resource-intensive for smaller organisations. SA8000 is not industry-specific, is recognised globally, and is applicable to both large and small organisations. However, the investment in audits, training, and compliance documentation can be significant, making this a barrier for some companies.

NEW QUESTION # 60

The UK has introduced several pieces of legislation relevant to CSR. Which legislation ensures that employers keep their workers safe?

- A. Working Time (Amendment) Regulations 2001
- B. Companies Act 2006
- C. Disability Discrimination Act 1995
- D. Health and Safety at Work Act 1974

Answer: D

Explanation:

Comprehensive and Detailed Explanation From Exact Extract of Documents:

The Health and Safety at Work Act 1974 requires UK employers to ensure that working conditions are safe and that risks to health are managed. According to the L5M5 study guide (p.6), this includes duties such as accident prevention, safe use of equipment, and training employees. While the Working Time Regulations (A) relate to working hours, the Companies Act (B) covers corporate governance, and the Disability Discrimination Act (D) focuses on preventing discrimination, only the Health and Safety at Work Act specifically ensures safe conditions. Procurement professionals must be aware of this when selecting and monitoring suppliers, particularly in high-risk industries.

NEW QUESTION # 61

Which of the following is not considered to be an alternative form of dispute resolution?

- A. Litigation
- B. Mediation
- C. Adjudication
- D. Conciliation

Answer: A

Explanation:

Comprehensive and Detailed Explanation From Exact Extract of Documents:

Alternative Dispute Resolution (ADR) mechanisms are encouraged in procurement as they save time, reduce costs, and preserve business relationships. The key ADR methods listed in the L5M5 study guide (p.188) include mediation, adjudication, and conciliation. These methods are designed as alternatives to litigation, which involves courts, legal judgments, and lengthy processes. Litigation is not an ADR method; it is the traditional approach, often more adversarial and costly. Procurement professionals are encouraged to adopt ADR whenever possible, as it helps maintain collaborative supplier relationships while resolving conflicts effectively.

NEW QUESTION # 62

What is a monopsony?

- A. There is only one buyer of a good
- B. There is only one supplier of a good
- C. There is only one market to sell the good in
- D. There is only one product available in the market

Answer: A

Explanation:

Comprehensive and Detailed Explanation From Exact Extract of Documents:

A monopsony exists when there is only one buyer in a market but multiple sellers. For example, in the defence industry, a government may be the sole buyer of military equipment such as submarines. This contrasts with a monopoly, where only one seller dominates the market. The L5M5 study guide (p.127) explains that monopsony can create power imbalances, as the buyer holds significant leverage over suppliers, potentially leading to unfair contract terms. Ethical procurement requires recognising such risks and ensuring that dominant buyers do not exploit suppliers unfairly.
