Signature exception

| ID | Element Type | Name | Value                     | Operation   |
|----|--------------|------|---------------------------|---|
| 1  | Full URL     |      | http://my.blog.org/user1V |  |

What will happen when a client attempts a mousedown cross-site scripting (XSS) attack against the site <http://my.blog.org/user1/blog.php> and FortiWeb is enforcing the highlighted signature?

- A. The connection will be blocked as an XSS attack.
- B. The connection will be stripped of the mousedown JavaScript code.
- C. The connection will be allowed.
- D. FortiWeb will report the new mousedown attack to FortiGuard.

Answer: C

Explanation:

In the provided configuration, the signature exception has been set for the URL <http://my.blog.org/user1V>. This means that any request to this specific URL will bypass the signature ID 01000001, which is designed to block cross-site scripting (XSS) attacks using the mousedown event. As the request comes from the URL <http://my.blog.org/user1/blog.php>, which does not match the exception rule for <http://my.blog.org/user1V>, the attack will be allowed through.

Therefore, the connection will be allowed because the exception rule bypasses protection for the specified URL.
