- A. Business Rules, and Script Includes
- B. Client Scripts and UI Policies only
- C. Client Scripts, UI Policies, and UI Actions

Answer: C

NEW QUESTION # 181

What field type would you select if you want to query records from another table on a form?

- A. Use the Reference field type.
- B. Use the Date field type.
- C. Use the Phone Number field type.
- D. Use the String field type.

Answer: A

Explanation:

A). Use the Date field type: This is incorrect. The Date field type is designed to store date values and does not facilitate referencing records from other tables.

B). Use the Phone Number field type: This is incorrect. The Phone Number field type is intended for storing phone number data and does not support referencing other table records.

C). Use the String field type: This is incorrect. The String field type stores text data and does not inherently provide functionality to reference records from other tables.

D). Use the Reference field type: This is correct. The Reference field type is specifically designed to create a link to a record in another table, enabling the incorporation of related data into the form.

For example, in the Incident table, the "Caller" field is a reference to the User [sys_user] table, allowing the selection of a user as the caller for the incident. This setup ensures data consistency and leverages existing records without data duplication.

For more detailed information, refer to the official ServiceNow documentation on Reference Fields.

Explanation:

In ServiceNow, to include data from another table within a form, the Reference field type is utilized. A Reference field creates a relationship between the current table and another table by storing a reference to a record in the target table. This allows users to select a record from the referenced table and display related information seamlessly within the form.

NEW QUESTION # 182

An app developer enables the "Allow access to this table via web services" option in Application Access. What is the result of this configuration?

- A. A user having correct permissions, querying via web services can access table records
- B. Developers from other application scope can write scripts for this table
- C. Users querying via web services can access table records, regardless of permissions
- D. Users are allowed to write table records but restricts delete via web services

Answer: A

Explanation:

Enabling "Allow access to this table via web services" allows authenticated users with proper roles to access this table via REST/SOAP APIs.

From Development Handbook 4.0.4, p. 191:

"This setting allows web service access to a table, but still requires that users have appropriate roles and permissions through ACLs." Thus, access isn't automatic - proper access controls still apply.
