NEW QUESTION # 53

In Power BI Desktop, you are building a sales report that contains two tables. Both tables have row-level security (RLS) configured.

You need to create a relationship between the tables. The solution must ensure that bidirectional cross-filtering honors the RLS settings.

What should you do?

- A. Create an active relationship between the tables and select Apply security filter in both directions.
- B. Create an inactive relationship between the tables and select Apply security filter in both directions.
- C. Create an active relationship between the tables and select Assume referential integrity.
- D. Create an inactive relationship between the tables and select Assume referential integrity.

Answer: A

Explanation:

By default, row-level security filtering uses single-directional filters, whether the relationships are set to single direction or bi-directional. You can manually enable bi-directional cross-filtering with row-level security by selecting the relationship and checking the Apply security filter in both directions checkbox.

Select this option when you've also implemented dynamic row-level security at the server level, where row-level security is based on username or login ID.
