Adobe Real-Time CDP Business Practitioner Professional Sample Questions (Q39-Q44):

NEW QUESTION # 39

A data architect is working for a global marketing agency that utilizes Adobe Experience Platform to manage and analyze client data. The architect's team is responsible for designing schemas that define the structure and format of various data sets.

One day, a client requests changes to an existing schema to accommodate new data points they want to capture for their customer profiles. The architect needs to ensure that the schema evolution principles are followed while making the necessary updates.

Which two changes to a schema are considered breaking changes when data is already loaded within Adobe Experience Platform? (Choose two.)

- A. Removing a previously defined field from the schema
- B. Adding new fields to the schema to capture additional data
- C. Enabling the schema to participate in Profile
- D. Renaming an existing field in the schema

Answer: A,D

NEW QUESTION # 40

Which components are required for Edge ingestion in Adobe RT-CDP? (Select two.)

- A. Real-time data processing engine.
- B. Streaming data connectors.
- C. Batch data exporters.
- D. Identity stitching rules.

Answer: A,B

NEW QUESTION # 41

A data engineer is concerned about a sudden increase in ingestion errors during data acquisition from a streaming source to Adobe Experience Platform (AEP). Which monitoring capability should the engineer enable in AEP to understand the cause of each ingestion failure?

- A. Enable Adobe I/O Events to receive real-time notifications about ingestion errors
- B. Enable Alert Rules for Ingestion Failures and Flow Run Failures
- C. Enable partial ingestion with Async Validation
- D. Enable System Events to receive real-time notifications about system failures

Answer: B

Explanation:

To effectively monitor and diagnose a sudden increase in ingestion errors, a data engineer must utilize the Alerting Service in Adobe Experience Platform. By enabling Alert Rules for Ingestion Failures and Flow Run Failures (Option A), the engineer can receive proactive notifications whenever a dataflow encounters an issue.

Alerts provide the necessary operational visibility by linking directly to the Monitoring dashboard, where the engineer can inspect specific flow runs. This allows for the investigation of error codes, such as schema validation mismatches or identity resolution failures, which are common in streaming sources. While Partial Ingestion (Option B) can help a process continue by skipping faulty records, it is a data handling strategy rather than a monitoring capability to "understand the cause" of failures.

Options C and D refer to Adobe I/O Events or general system events, which are primarily used for building external, custom webhook integrations rather than using the native, built-in monitoring and alerting UI specifically designed for dataflow oversight. By subscribing to native alerts, the data engineer ensures they are notified of failures as they happen, allowing for immediate remediation to maintain the integrity of the Real-Time Customer Profile.

NEW QUESTION # 42

A data architect is tasked with enabling same-page and next-page personalization use cases via Adobe Target to ensure real-time targeting based on customer's interaction on the website.

Which two are prerequisites for activating the audiences to Adobe Target for onsite personalization? (Choose two.)

- A. Grant users access to the default workspace and the Approver role
- B. Activate the Active-On-Edge merge policy to constantly evaluate audiences on the edge
- C. Implement a custom merge policy to evaluate audiences in real-time
- D. Create a separate workspace in Adobe Target for real-time and next-page personalization

Answer: A,B

NEW QUESTION # 43

A data architect is building an XDM Experience Event Schema for loading event data from the Adobe Experience Platform (AEP) Web SDK. The data is intended to be used in the Real-Time customer profile and requires a primary identity to be present in the schema. The architect wants to be able to store both ambiguous and authenticated web data. Does the data architect need to select a field as a primary identity?

- A. Yes, the architect will select a field from the schema and mark it as primary.
- B. Yes, the architect will select the identity map and mark it as primary.
- C. No, the primary identity will already be in the identity map.
- D. No, a field on the schema will automatically be marked.

Answer: C

Explanation:

When working with the Adobe Experience Platform (AEP) Web SDK, the standard practice for handling identities is to use the Identity Map field group. This field group allows for the collection of multiple identities (such as an ECID for anonymous tracking and a CRM ID for authenticated users) within a single event.

For schemas designed for the Web SDK, the Identity Map is the preferred method because it provides the flexibility to handle both ambiguous (anonymous) and authenticated data dynamically. When data is sent via the Web SDK, the primary identity is not hard-coded as a specific single field in the schema definition (like a specific "email" field marked as primary). Instead, the identity information is contained within the identityMap object of the JSON payload.

Adobe Experience Platform's Identity Service automatically processes this identityMap. The primary identity is determined based on the contents of the map sent in the hit—for example, the Web SDK can designate the ECID as the primary identity for anonymous hits or a CRM ID as the primary identity once the user logs in.

Therefore, the architect does not need to manually select a fixed field in the schema to be the primary identity; the platform relies on the dynamic identity map to resolve the profile at ingestion time. This approach is essential for supporting the transition from an anonymous visitor to a known customer without requiring separate schema configurations.
