NEW QUESTION # 13

Currently, the 'Affects Version/s' field is populated on issues in a particular company-managed project. Now, you want to hide it when viewing issues and to hide its values when viewing filter results. Where would you go to make the change?

- A. Screen
- B. Issue detail view
- C. Field configuration
- D. Custom field context
- E. Issue layout

Answer: E

Explanation:

To hide theAffects Version/sfield when viewing issues and in filter results in a company-managed project, you need to configure theissue layout(Option E). The issue layout determines which fields are displayed or hidden in the issue view and affects how fields appear in filter results.

* Explanation of the Correct Answer (Option E):

* Theissue layoutin a company-managed project controls the visibility and arrangement of fields in the issue view (when viewing an issue) and influences how fields are displayed in filter results (e.

g., in issue navigator or boards). To hide theAffects Version/sfield, you can move it to the Hidden fieldssection in the issue layout. This ensures the field is not shown in the issue view or filter results, even if it contains values.

* Exact Extract from Documentation:

Configure issue layouts in company-managed projects

Issue layouts define which fields are displayed, hidden, or placed in the context panel when viewing issues.

They also influence field visibility in filter results.

To hide a field:

* Go toProject settings > Issue layout.

* Select the issue type or screen to configure.

* Move the field (e.g., Affects Version/s) to theHidden fieldssection.Note: Hiding a field in the issue layout does not remove it from screens used for Create or Edit operations, but it prevents it from appearing in the issue view and filter results.(Source: Atlassian Support Documentation, "Configure issue layouts in Jira Cloud")

* Why This Fits: Theissue layoutdirectly controls field visibility in the issue viewand filter results, making it the correct place to hide theAffects Version/sfield, satisfying both requirements.

* Why Other Options Are Incorrect:

* Issue detail view (Option A):

* Theissue detail viewis part of the issue view interface and is not a configuration setting. It is affected by the issue layout but cannot be directly modified to hide fields.

* Extract from Documentation:

The issue detail view displays fields based on the issue layout configuration. To hide fields, configure the issue layout inProject settings > Issue layout.

(Source: Atlassian Support Documentation, "Configure issue layouts in Jira Cloud")

* Field configuration (Option B):

* Field configurationscontrol whether fields are required, optional, or hidden for specific issue types. Hiding a field in a field configuration removes it from all operations (Create, Edit, View), which would preventAffects Version/sfrom being populated at all. The requirement is to hide the field only when viewing and in filter results, not to remove it entirely, so field configuration is not suitable.

* Extract from Documentation:

Hiding a field in a field configuration removes it from all screens and operations. Use issue layouts to hide fields in the issue view and filter results.

(Source: Atlassian Support Documentation, "Configure field settings")

* Custom field context (Option C):

* Custom field contextsdefine the options and default values for a custom field across projects or issue types. TheAffects Version/sfield is a system field, not a custom field, and contexts do not control field visibility in the issue view or filter results.

* Extract from Documentation:

Custom field contexts apply to custom fields and manage options, not visibility. System fields likeAffects Version/sare not affected by contexts.

(Source: Atlassian Support Documentation, "Manage custom fields in Jira Cloud")

* Screen (Option D):

* Screensdetermine which fields appear during issue operations (Create, Edit, View).

RemovingAffects Version/sfrom a screen would affect Create or Edit operations, not just viewing, and would not specifically hide the field in filter results. The issue layout is the correct place for view-specific changes.

* Extract from Documentation:
Screens control fields for Create, Edit, and View operations. To hide fields in the issue view and filter results, use the issue layout.
(Source: Atlassian Support Documentation, "Configure screens in Jira Cloud")
* Additional Notes:
* Configuring the issue layout requires project admin privileges and is done in Project settings > Issue layout.
* Hiding Affects Version/s in the issue layout does not remove its values from the database; it only prevents display in the issue view and filter results.
* Ensure the field remains on relevant screens for Create/Edit if it needs to continue being populated.
