Nutanix Certified Professional - Multicloud Infrastructure (NCP-MCI v6.10) Sample Questions (Q101-Q106):

NEW QUESTION # 101

Which Nutanix solution integrates with third-party backup tools for long-term data retention?

- A. Nutanix Leap
- B. Nutanix Mine
- C. Nutanix Move
- D. Nutanix Beam

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 102

Due to application requirements, an administrator needs to modify an AHV VM in order to support a large number of distinct, concurrent connections. The VM has the following configuration:

* VCPUs: 4

* RAM: 20 GB

Operating System: Microsoft Windows Server 2022

Which modification can the administrator make to improve network performance for network I/O-intensive applications running on this VM?

- A. Adding more VCPUs
- B. Enabling RSS Virtio-Net Multi-Queue
- C. Adding more RAM
- D. Enabling AHV Turbo Technology

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 103

An administrator recently attempted to enable Data-in-Transit Encryption on a scale-out Prism Central cluster to ensure service-level traffic is encrypted between cluster nodes. After attempting to enable the feature, it did not function because of firewall restrictions. Which CVM-specific port must be allowed through the firewall for Data-in-Transit Encryption?

- A. 0
- B. 1
- C. 2
- D. 3

Answer: C

Explanation:

Data-in-Transit Encryption for Prism Central and CVMs requires specific internal communication ports to be open. Nutanix internal component documentation states:

"Port 2020 is used by the Nutanix encryption service for encrypted CVM-to-CVM communication during Data-in-Transit Encryption operations." This port is essential for establishing secure tunnels between control-plane services. Ports 2009 and 2010 are used by other CVM services (e.g., Stargate, Curator coordination) but not for transport encryption. Port 9440 is for Prism UI/API traffic, and while it must be accessible for management, it does not enable encrypted back-end service traffic. Thus, the administrator must ensure that port 2020 is permitted to enable Data-in-Transit Encryption functionality.

NEW QUESTION # 104

In Nutanix, what is the purpose of Storage QoS?

- A. To manage data locality within a Nutanix cluster
- B. To limit IOPS consumption of specific workloads
- C. To increase the size of virtual machines dynamically
- D. To enable deduplication and compression

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 105

An administrator wants to enable application discovery on a Nutanix cluster to monitor applications. A Prism Central instance is already configured with sufficient CPU and memory.

What other prerequisites must be met before enabling application discovery? (Choose two.)

- A. Sufficient Prism Central VM resources
- B. Network controller is enabled
- C. Internet connection
- D. API key and key ID

Answer: A,C

Explanation:

Application discovery in Prism Central requires sufficient Prism Central resources and an active internet connection to retrieve application signatures.

* Option A (Sufficient Prism Central VM resources) is correct:

* Prism Central needs adequate CPU and memory to process application signatures and discovery data.

* Option B (Internet connection) is correct:

* Application discovery depends on Nutanix's cloud database to recognize application patterns.

* Option C (API key and key ID) is incorrect:

* API keys are not required for automatic application discovery.

* Option D (Network controller enabled) is incorrect:

* Application discovery does not depend on a network controller feature.
