UiPath Automation Developer Associate v1 Exam Sample Questions (Q132-Q137):

NEW QUESTION # 132
What variable type should the developer use to store the monetary amount read from a single cell in an Excel file, before inputting it into a field in a web application for the automation process?

- A. List
- B. Object
- C. Double
- D. DataRow

Answer: C

Explanation:
Explanation
The variable type that the developer should use to store the monetary amount read from a single cell in an Excel file, before inputting it into a field in a web application for the automation process, is Double. This is because the Double variable type can store decimal numbers with high precision and a large range of values.
This is suitable for storing monetary amounts that may have fractions or large digits. The Double variable type can be used with the Read Cell activity to read the value from the Excel file, and with the Type Into activity to input the value into the web application.
The developer can also use the Format Value activity to format the Double variable as a currency, if needed.

NEW QUESTION # 133
In which stage of the UiPath implementation model are the chosen processes analyzed in their AS-IS state?

- A. Kick-Off
- B. Development
- C. Process Analysis
- D. Solution Design

Answer: C

Explanation:
In the UiPath implementation model, the stage where the chosen processes are analyzed in their AS-IS state is during the "Process Analysis" phase. This phase involves understanding the current state of the processes to be automated, identifying their challenges, and determining the requirements for the automation solution.

NEW QUESTION # 134
A developer has created the following workflow:

Based on the exhibit, which output is produced in the Output panel?

- A. World
- B. Hello World
- C. World Hello
- D. Hello

Answer: B

Explanation:
Explanation
The output panel will display "Hello World" because the workflow is designed to first display "Hello" and then "World" in the output panel. The workflow starts with an Assign activity that initializes the Boolean flag to True. Then, the While activity checks if the flag is True. If it is, the workflow enters the Body section of the While activity. Inside the Body section, the workflow checks if the flag is True. If it is, the workflow enters the Then section of the If activity and displays "Hello" in the output panel. Then, the Assign activity sets the flag to False. Since the flag is now False, the workflow enters the Else section of the If activity and displays

"World" in the output panel. Finally, the workflow exits the While activity since the flag is now False.

NEW QUESTION # 135

Following UiPath best practices, which project structure is best-suited for complex processes in UiPath Studio?

- A. Global Exception Handler
- B. Flowchart
- C. Sequence
- D. State Machine

Answer: D

Explanation:
Explanation
According to the UiPath documentation and best practices, the State Machine project structure is best-suited for complex processes that involve multiple states and transitions between them12. A State Machine workflow can model the behavior of a system in terms of states, such as "Init", "Get Transaction Data", "Process Transaction", and "End Process", and transitions, such as "Success", "Business Rule Exception", or "System Error". A State Machine workflow can also have entry and exit actions for each state, which are activities that execute when the system enters or exits the state, respectively1.
A State Machine project structure has several advantages over other project structures, such as Sequence, Flowchart, or Global Exception Handler, for complex processes2:
It can handle complex logic and branching conditions more easily and clearly than a Sequence or a Flowchart, which can become cluttered and hard to maintain for large processes2.
It can handle exceptions and errors more efficiently and consistently than a Global Exception Handler, which is a separate workflow that handles all exceptions in a project. A State Machine can have dedicated states and transitions for handling different types of exceptions, such as business rule exceptions or system errors, and can also use retry mechanisms or recovery actions2.
It can improve the readability, modularity, and reusability of the workflows, by breaking down the process into smaller and coherent states that can be invoked from the main workflow. This also facilitates collaboration and testing among developers2.
Therefore, a State Machine project structure is best-suited for complex processes that involve multiple states and transitions between them.

NEW QUESTION # 136

A developer is building a process that needs to click an element which requires a mouse hover to become visible. However, the element does not appear with the default click setting. The input method for the Click activity is Send Window Message Which property should the developer configure to be able to click the element?

- A. The developer should change the input method to Hardware Events and the CursorMotionType to Smooth.
- B. The developer should change the input method to Simulate and the CursorMotionType to Instant.
- C. The property AlterIfDisabled should be set to False.
- D. The property AlterIfDisabled should be set to True.

Answer: A

Explanation:
The input method for the Click activity determines how the click is performed on the target element. The Send Window Message input method is fast and reliable, but it does not support hovering over elements.
Therefore, the developer should use the Hardware Events input method, which simulates the real mouse and keyboard actions. The CursorMotionType property specifies how the cursor moves to the target element. The Smooth option makes the cursor move in a natural way, which can trigger the hover effect on the element. (UiPath Studio documentation12)
