IBM MQ v9.4 Administrator - Professional Sample Questions (Q158-Q163):

NEW QUESTION # 158

For a financial application where it is critical that each message is processed exactly once and in the correct sequence, which IBM MQ feature combination should be used to ensure message reliability, consistency, and order even under high-throughput conditions with multiple producers and consumers?

- A. Non-persistent messages with asynchronous delivery
- B. Temporary queues with multiple consumers
- C. Persistent messages with MQ transactions and message grouping
- D. Alias queues with manual routing

Answer: C

Explanation:

Using persistent messages within transactions ensures exactly-once delivery, while message grouping maintains the order of related messages, even with multiple producers and consumers in high-throughput scenarios.

NEW QUESTION # 159

A developer needs to implement a system where one application publishes event notifications such as "new order placed" and multiple subscribing applications (like billing, inventory, and shipping) independently consume those notifications without interfering with each other. Which IBM MQ feature should be used?

- A. Request/reply queues
- B. Publish/subscribe with topics
- C. Point-to-point queue model
- D. Dead-letter queues

Answer: B

Explanation:

Publish/subscribe in IBM MQ enables one-to-many message distribution where multiple subscribers receive event notifications independently.

NEW QUESTION # 160

Which of the following best describes the role of a Queue Manager in IBM MQ, including its responsibilities for handling message storage, retrieval, and ensuring reliable delivery across different applications?

- A. A storage facility that only stores messages temporarily without managing delivery
- B. A utility that converts messages from one format to another
- C. A process that only monitors network traffic between applications
- D. The central component responsible for managing queues, message routing, and ensuring reliable message delivery

Answer: D

Explanation:

Queue Manager is the core component in IBM MQ responsible for managing queues, storing messages, routing them to appropriate destinations, and ensuring reliable delivery between applications.

NEW QUESTION # 161

While configuring IBM MQ channels for secure communication between two queue managers over an untrusted network, which combination of channel type and security setting is most appropriate to guarantee both encryption and authentication of messages?

- A. Cluster channel with no security
- B. Transmission queue with IP filtering only
- C. Requester-server channel with plain text
- D. Sender-receiver channel with SSL/TLS and certificate-based authentication

Answer: D

Explanation:

Using sender-receiver channels with SSL/TLS encryption and certificate-based authentication ensures messages are both encrypted and authenticated over untrusted networks.

NEW QUESTION # 162

Which explanation best describes the role and configuration of IBM MQ message selectors in complex messaging scenarios, including how selectors filter messages based on header properties or custom application-defined attributes to allow subscribers or applications to receive only the relevant subset of messages?

- A. Message selectors automatically route all messages to every subscriber
- B. Message selectors evaluate message properties using expressions to filter messages, allowing subscribers to consume only messages that match specified criteria
- C. Message selectors are only used for logging purposes and do not filter messages
- D. Message selectors require changes to the message body to function

Answer: B

Explanation:

Message selectors use properties in MQ message headers to filter messages. Subscribers receive only messages that match the selector criteria, improving efficiency and reducing unnecessary message processing.
