APICS Certified in Planning and Inventory Management (CPIM 8.0) Sample Questions (Q38-Q43):

NEW QUESTION # 38

An organization is considering options to outsource their Information Technology (IT) operations. Although they do not sell anything on the Internet, they have a strong requirement in uptime of their application. After the offerings received by the Cloud Service Provider (CSP), the IT manager decided it was mandatory to develop processes to continue operations without access to community or public cloud-based applications. Which of the following arguments MOST likely led the IT manager to make this decision?

- A. Integrity and confidentiality are not ensured properly on the most cloud service offerings.
- B. Circumstances may force a cloud provider to discontinue operations.
- C. Most cloud services offerings are unique to each provider and may not be easily portable.
- D. The need to develop alternative hosting strategies for applications deployed to the cloud.

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 39

What is the MOST appropriate action to take when media classification needs to be downgraded to a less sensitive classification?

- A. Modify access logging on media at appropriate classification level.
- B. Sanitize media using appropriate data destruction procedure.
- C. Mark the media with less sensitive classification label.
- D. Modify access permissions on media at appropriate classification level.

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 40

If all other factors remain the same, when finished goods inventory investment is increased, service levels typically will:

- A. increase at an increasing rate.
- B. remain the same.
- C. increase in direct (linear) proportion.
- D. increase at a decreasing rate.

Answer: D

Explanation:

Increasing finished goods inventory investment will improve service levels by reducing the probability of stockouts. However, the relationship between inventory and service level is not linear, but rather asymptotic. This means that as inventory increases, service level increases at a decreasing rate, approaching a maximum value. Therefore, option C is correct. Option A is incorrect because service level will not remain the same when inventory changes. Option B is incorrect because service level will not increase in direct proportion to inventory. Option D is incorrect because service level will not increase at an increasing rate as inventory increases. NEW QUESTION # 41

Which of the following ensures privileges are current and appropriately reflect an individual's authorized roles and responsibilities?

- A. Access approval
- B. Access review
- C. Identity management
- D. Access authorization

Answer: B

NEW QUESTION # 42

The demand for an item has increasing forecast error, whereas all other factors remain constant. Which of the following remains constant while maintaining the same customer service level?

- A. Safety stock
- B. Reorder point(ROP)
- C. Safety factor
- D. Inventory investment

Answer: C

Explanation:

Safety factor is a multiplier that is applied to the standard deviation of demand to determine the safety stock level. Safety factor remains constant while maintaining the same customer service level, as it reflects the desired probability of not stocking out. The higher the safety factor, the higher the customer service level, and vice versa. The other factors do not remain constant while maintaining the same customer service level. Reorder point (ROP) is the inventory level that triggers a replenishment order. ROP increases with increasing forecast error, as more safety stock is needed to cover the demand uncertainty. Safety stock is the inventory that is carried to protect against forecast errors and demand fluctuations. Safety stock increases with increasing forecast error, as more buffer is needed to avoid stockouts. Inventory investment is the total value of the inventory that is held in the system. Inventory investment increases with increasing forecast error, as more inventory is required to maintain the same customer service level.
